B.C. air safety questioned

Bill Halkett photo

FRIENDLY WAVES from Larry Bell and Cathy Lancton to growing fleet of Swiftsure entrants berthing in Inner Harbor are the kind yachtsmen like. It's almost certain not all the waves they'll encounter in the sailing classic which starts Saturday will be quite as pleasant. See race story Page 21.

Rules broken, inquiry told

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Dubin commission on aviation safety was told Thursday that breaches of the regulations are common practice in the air industry in B.C.

Chief commission counsel John Sopeka said evidence gathered by commission investigators shows the practices include:

— Overloading of aircraft;

— Pilots pressured into flying in bad weather because many companies maintain a policy of not paying them unless they reach their destination;

— During peak periods pilots work inordinate hours and often fly when suffering from extreme fatigue.

The commission is examining enforcement of air regulations and standards in the Pacific region, which covers the whole of B.C. except for the Peace River country.

But the department's top aviation official in B.C. said he only has two men to carry out the enforcement of air regulations throughout the province and is "just plain stuck with limited resources."

Albert Bach, regional administrator for the Canadian Air Transportation Administration, said much of his time is spent on the department's role as landlord of airports, dealing with problems arising from duty free shops, car rental agencies and bus services.

"I have become convinced it is a great mistake to be the operator of airport terminals and parking lots," he said.

He said he cannot understand why other people do not want to take over the terminals.

"I have always regarded Vancouver International as a licence to print money," and the department takes in about $30 million a year there.

Bach said B.C. does not get its proper share of staff for the amount of air traffic in the province — it has 10 per cent of Canada's population but nearly 20 per cent of the aviation activity — and difficult flying conditions.

"We are in a bind, a very tight bind. I cannot get people," because the federal treasury board has been "absolutely rock hard" against providing extra resources in aviation administration.

Sopeka said commission inquiries showed both the courts and ministry officials are excessively lenient in enforcing air regulations.

Walter McLeish, Ottawa-based head of the air transportation administration, told the commission he has been unable to get needed changes in the Aeronautics Act under four transport ministers.

"In fact there are current legal opinions that many procedures of inspection, certification, approvals, delegation and enforcement are not enabled (authorized) by the act."

B.C. minimum wage to $3.40 July 1

By JAKE BANKY

The minimum wage rate is going up in B.C. but Labor Minister Jack Heinrich admits the two-stage increase does not keep pace with inflation.

The present $3-an-hour minimum for adults will go up to $3.40 July 1 and $3.65 next Dec. 1.

The minimum wage for those 17 years old and younger will go from the present $2.60 an hour to $2.85 July 1 and $3 an hour Dec. 1.

The hikes will benefit thousands of workers in B.C. including many in Victoria's hospitality and tourist industries.

A spokesman for the Visitors Information Centre said while the increases are fair they will probably mean higher prices in restaurants and other visitor-oriented businesses.

There will have to be wage increases for all employees, Ed Higgin said.

"When you give your lowest-paid employees an increase of 40 cents, you have to give it to those above them as well, to maintain the gap. This makes a significant impact on your wage costs."

Higgin said the industry will have to increase its prices and hope the tourists accept the higher rates.

At $3.40 on July 1, the B.C. level will still be below Saskatchewan and Quebec where it is $3.65 and below Alberta where it is $3.50.

Heinrich agreed the increases will not balance the rate of inflation over the past four years.

He said since the last increase in the minimum wage, June 1, 1976, the consumer price index has gone up about 30 per cent.

The new minimum announced Thursday amounts to a 22 per cent increase when fully in effect.

"Perhaps in years to come adjustments can be made," the minister said.

"I'd like to think the government is sensitive enough to acknowledge the cost of living and the impact it has on marginal earners."

Heinrich also admitted the government should have acted faster to improve the minimum wage.

"It probably should have been looked at earlier. There's no sense beating around the bush about it."

He gave a firm commitment that, as long as he is minister of labor, he will reconsider the minimum wage on an annual basis.

The government did look at the possibility of indexing the minimum wage to the cost of living, Heinrich said. He was reluctant to say the idea was rejected outright but he told a press conference, "It is not under consideration at this time."

Heinrich said by next December, B.C.'s minimum wage of $3.65 an hour will be in line with the highest rates prevailing in Canada.

Quebec and Saskatchewan recently boosted their rates to $3.65. Alberta increased its rate to $3.50 earlier this month. Minimum wage rates in the other provinces are in the $2.75-to-$3.15 range.

However NDP labor critic Karen Sanford said she is disappointed.

"This is the absolute minimum the minister could have introduced. I don't think it's adequate.

"A rate of $3.40 or $3.65 is still going to make life difficult for the people who have to survive on the minimum wage."

The labor minister said there are no reliable statistics on the number of British Columbians now receiving the minimum wage.

Many of those are in the hospitality industry, Heinrich said, and the industry has not objected to the increase.

The minister met with industry representatives before making his announcement. "They were aware the minimum wage had to be adjusted and it was acceptable to them," he said.

Centre backers win 5-3

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Two months of controversy over the convention centre came to an end Thursday night as Victoria city council decided 5-3 to let the $8 million waterfront project go ahead.

But there was something in the decision for both sides.

Mayor Bill Tindall announced that because of the objections about the design, the centre will be lowered by eight or nine feet to block less of the view from Wharf Street.

Dr. Arne Lane, president of the Pan-Pacific group which has organized the project, said construction could start by June 15.

Council held two votes on the proposal, the first a 5-3 decision to amend the harbor zoning to permit public buildings such as the convention centre. The second was a unanimous vote to issue a development permit.

The proposed changes to the design mean the centre will come back before council one last time next month after city planners

Two escape after island shoot-out

An RCMP manhunt was under way today in the wake of what's being called the Gulf Islands gun battle.

Police using a tracking dog are seeking two men wanted in connection with a robbery and shoot-out on tiny Jackscrew Island Thursday afternoon.

Officers are concentrating their hunt on Galiano Island where a small boat in which the robbers made their get-away was found on a beach near Porlier Pass early today.

Sgt. Mitchell Hanks of the RCMP detachment in Ganges said no one was injured in the shoot-out.

The incident started when a middle-aged man and his wife — police withheld their names — returned to their home on Jackscrew Island about 2:30 p.m. to find two men carting off their belongings.

Hanks said the intruders had removed a quantity of goods including jewelry, liquor, a chainsaw and a shotgun when they were interrupted by the couple returning from a shopping trip in Ganges.

Postal talks founder again

OTTAWA (CP) — Postal contract talks were on the verge of a breakdown today as government and union negotiators reached an impasse on a proposal for a shorter work week.

An official at union headquarters said an agreement between the two parties on a reduction of weekly work hours to 37½ from 40 was part of an agreement in principle on a contract reached Tuesday.

However, negotiators have been unable to agree on the details of this proposal.

The negotiating breakthrough announced Wednesday was spearheaded by Postmaster-General Andre Ouellet, Jean-Claude Parrot, president of the 23,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW), and Dennis McDermott, president of the Canadian Labor Congress.

The agreement in principle was to reduce the work week by giving postal workers a half-paid, one-hour meal break. However, the government now wants them to perform the same amount of work in 37½ hours that they now perform in 40 hours, the union official said.

The government wants to measure the productivity of individual workers, a practice the union wants banned.

As the marathon negotiations resumed today, it was confirmed that the Ottawa and Monteal CUPW locals have voted to give union officials a strike mandate. Weekend strike votes are set in Toronto and Vancouver, the other two key CUPW locals.

Victoria-area CUPW members were also to be voting Sunday.

Thousands flee Ontario fires

The Canadian Press

More than 5,000 persons were forced from their homes in northern Ontario, hundreds more were preparing to leave, and firefighters battling almost 600 forest fires across Canada were warned today to expect little immediate relief from the hot, humid weather fostering many of the steadily-spreading blazes.

In B.C., a 50,000-acre forest fire was one of 238 burning throughout the province.

B.C. and Alberta firefighters were combining forces against the fire, raging out of control along the B.C.-Alberta boundary east of Fort Nelson.

In Ontario, about 5,000 people were evacuated from the gold-mining town of Red Lake as a fire spread over 8,000 acres moved toward the town.

Another dangerous fire was a 35,000-acre blaze that threatened to destroy the remote community of Fort Hope, an Indian settlement 350 kilometres north of Thunder Bay.

About 600 residents of the lumber town were evacuated Thursday.

In Manitoba, firefighters were preparing to defend the north edge of Snow Lake, a community about 700 kilometres north of Winnipeg, as shifting winds brought a huge forest fire to within five kilometres of the town.

Most women and children left the mining community of 2,000 on Tuesday.

The fire raging in the Porcupine Provincial Forest in west central Manitoba has consumed more than 370 square kilometres.

In Saskatchewan, at least 68 fires were burning. However, Alberta was the province hit hardest by fires. Officials said they could not remember such severe conditions this early in the year.

At least 61 fires were burning Thursday in Alberta, destroying more than 1.3 million acres.

"I've never seen fires burn like this, where you've got 80- to 100-foot trees and flames three times as high," said Joe Smith, air operations officer at Peace River.

PM: not one word -just a guffaw

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition taunts, poetry and cough drops failed to persuade Prime Minister Trudeau to utter one public word during the Commons question period today.

Although several opposition MPs directed questions to the prime minister, he left the answers to cabinet members or parliamentary secretaries.

He did guffaw, however, when Progressive Conservative Tom Cossitt, sent a poem and some Hall's cough drops across the Commons floor.

The poem went:

In view of your inability to talk, or apparently even utter a squawk;

I hate to see you look like a goat, so here are some "Hall's" for your throat.

Trudean's written response given to reporters later by Cossitt:

"I would feel safer if you took one first."

Games boycott flop, Soviets crow

MOSCOW (Reuter) — The Soviet press triumphantly pronounced U.S. President Carter's Olympic boycott a miserable flop today on the eve of the deadline for filing applications for the summer games in Moscow.

Despite the absence of the United States, West Germany and Canada, the games now seem certain to be attended by the vast majority of the Olympic movement and the bulk of the strongest sporting nations.

Howwever, the United States undertook a final lobbying effort today to expand the boycott after saying it would counter any attempt to lift the Saturday deadline for decisions.

U.S. diplomats around the world made a last try today at urging friendly governments to take a stand, hoping that this would convince national Olympic committees not to attend.

Vitaly Smirnov, deputy chairman of the organizing committee for the games, said on Soviet television that 102 national Olympic committees had indicated they would compete in Moscow, though this was not a firm total of entries.

After West Germany's Olympic committee decided to join the boycott earlier this month, Soviet organizers worried that a snowball effect would turn the Olympics into little more than a meeting of the Soviet Union, its allies and a few Third World nations. That worry appears to have been dispelled.

Some events may suffer from the absence of the Americans and the West Germans but the damage is not likely to be disastrous and the Communist countries will win more medals.

When the games open July 19, the stay-at-home Americans will be isolated from the bulk of their allies. West Germany will be similarly isolated from its European Common Market partners.

The partial boycott also will keep from Moscow some teams which only IOC rules forced the Soviet organizers to invite.

Chile and other rightwing dictatorships will be missing, and so will Israel, the presence of whose team might have led to demonstrations of sympathy from Soviet Jews.

The government of Japan today threatened to tighten financial screws on the Japanese Olympic Committee if the committee sends even a reduced team to Moscow.

The Japanese Committee Thursday put off a decision until Saturday, the official deadline to accept invitations.

The fact that teams from Britain, Australia and many other Western countries will be coming to Moscow in defiance of their governments offers additional propaganda for Soviet leaders.

The Soviet press has lavished praise on Britain's Olympic association for leading the breach in the boycott campaign and defying Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

cated just west of North Galiano Island.

Hanks said one of the men grabbed the shotgun and told the couple to back off.

The robbers then climbed into a 14-foot boat and roared off, taking the gun and some of the liquor.

Hanks said the owner opened fire at the men with a rifle as the boat sped off.

The robbers returned the fire with a blast from the shotgun.

In all, about six shots were fired, Hanks said.

And though no one was hit, one shot went through the hull of the robbers' boat.

The owner called for help over his high frequency radio phone and the signal was picked up by a Coast Guard vessel which alerted police.

Two RCMP vessels, the Athabasca stationed at Ganges and the Manyberries from Vancouver went to the scene and started a search of nearby islands.

The stolen boat was found early today. Its outboard engine had been removed.

Officers are also checking ferry terminals and have alerted residents of Galiano to look out for the two suspects, described only as white, male and in their late teens or early 20s.

S.A. rioters torch movie theatre

BLOEMFONTEIN (Reuter) — Demonstrators set fire to a movie theatre and gasoline-bombed a policeman's house in a black township near Bloemfontein, South African police said today.

After a night of arson, violence and stone-throwing, police said they arrested 15 people.

"Roads are still being blocked with boulders and vehicles are still being stoned but it is quieter now than it was last night," a police spokesman said.

The black townships around the Orange Free State city have been the scene of the worst violence in a country-wide protest by students against racial inequality in South Africa's education system.

Police in armored riot vehicles patrolled the townships and escorted commuter buses.

The police spokesman said the movie theatre was badly damaged when a gang set it afire.

$450,000 bid for 3 acres accepted

An offer of $450,000 for three acres of city property in the Hillside-Cedar Hill area was accepted by Victoria city council Thursday night.

The Victoria Innovative Housing Society, a coalition of credit unions and labor organizations, plans to build a 30-unit housing co-op on the Mt. Stephen site.

It submitted the only bid for the property when it was advertised recently by the city.

B.C.'s position flexible, Bennett tells Chretien

B.C. will be flexible at any new constitutional conference, Premier Bill Bennett said Thursday.

But that flexibility won't extend to the inclusion of Quebec Liberal leader Claude Ryan or B.C. NDP leader Dave Barrett as participants in the talks.

Bennett made it clear he does not want Ryan at the forthcoming summit meeting on constitutional change, despite his referendum victory.

"If it's a first ministers' conference, it's a first ministers' conference," Bennett told reporters.

On the same basis, Barrett should not expect an invitation either, Bennett indicated.

The premier raised no objection to a July conference as proposed by Prime Minister Trudeau, saying only that all provinces must be given adequate time to prepare.

"I think one should be held after everybody is prepared, in light of current events, to present both their problems and their solutions," he said.

"I'm always prepared," he added with a laugh.

"The basic things in dealing with the constitution is to stand fast to your principles but be flexible enough to accommodate a satisfactory conclusion," he said.

Bennett, who met with federal Justice Minister Jean Chretien for two hours Thursday night, wouldn't say what new proposals B.C. might put forth at a constitutional conference.

Discussions were broad and covered a number of areas, said Bennett.

"It would be difficult to pick out a single item and say it was a recommendation."

Chretien also declined to give any specifics, but said the meeting was productive.

"In light of the developments of this week, I was very pleased to see the unification of your administration here to Canada and everyone agreed that we have to make some progress rapidly on a new constitution."

Chretien's whirlwind tour of four provincial capitals in Western Canada produced no definite agreement on the timing of a constitutional conference.

Chretien, the federal government's unity missionary, stopped in Winnipeg, Regina and Edmonton Thursday before wrapping up the first part of his tour with Bennett and his officials.

He met with Ontario Premier Bill Davis on Wednesday, shortly after Trudeau annouced that Chretien, who headed the no forces for Ottawa in the Quebec referendum, would hear the 10 premiers' views on constitutional change and report to him Saturday.

Most of the premiers have called for an early first ministers' conference.

Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney suggested a preliminary conference in a few weeks that would strike a permanent committee of ministers on constitutional change. The committee would do the spade work for a constitutional conference in the fall aimed at making concrete changes before the end of the year.

Chretien said others think the premiers and the prime minister should begin work immediately. But he said he is sorry Claude Morin, Quebec's intergovernmental affairs minister, has put off a meeting for a week.

"I wish he would have met with me or Premier (Rene) Levesque, but I can understand it is not easy for them at this time," he said.

Chretien got some good news in Manitoba where Premier Sterling Lyon said language rights could be entrenched in the constitution through an amendment to the British North America Act without having to include a complete bill of rights.

Manitoba was a major stumbling block in the last constitutional conference in February, 1979, preventing agreement on entrenching language rights.

"I'm very pleased with what I heard," he said in Edmonton after a two-hour meeting with Dick Johnston, Alberta's intergovernmental affairs minister.

Premier Peter Lougheed spent about 30 minutes in the meeting, and the rest of the afternoon at the legislature which ended its spring sitting Thursday night.

Johnston predicted progress in resolving some of the differences between Alberta and Ottawa. But both he and Chretien said only general ideas were exchanged.

Chretien, who meets the premiers of the four Atlantic provinces today, was asked if the frantic schedule he is on has made him tired.

"No I'm in good shape you know, when you win it gives you a lot of added energy."

Shopping law letter-getter

Attorney-General Allan Williams is up to his neck in protests about his Holiday Shopping Act but said Thursday he has no intention of withdrawing the bill.

The legislation would give to municipalities the power to set their own Sunday closing regulations.

Williams, principle target in the paper war, has received several hundred letters on the subject, apparently all of them opposed to the bill.

MLAs on both sides of the house have also been snowed under by protest mail.

One Socred member received 140 such letters in a single day.

"There appears to be a very carefully organized campaign," Williams said.

"The letters have a strange similarity."

He would not speculate on who might have organized the letter-writing campaign but other sources indicate it is a co-operative effort by various religious organizations.

"I'll be preparing a response to all the people that have written to me," Williams said.

"I think there has been some misunderstanding on their part and some unnecessary apprehension as to what the bill might produce.

"We'll be taking steps to ensure that any misinterpretations are corrected."

Clergy, unions and merchants have all spoken out against the legislation but for widely different reasons.

Churchmen object for religious reasons, unions because they don't want their members working Sundays and merchants because they fear competition from stores in neighbouring municipalities.

King urges mortgage program expansion

The provincial government should expand its 9¾-per-cent mortgage lending program to stimulate construction of rental housing and help alleviate mounting layoffs in the forest industry, NDP forestry critic Bill King said Thursday.

"A zero vacancy rate in our metropolitan centres is reason enough to expand activity in this sector," he said.

"The situation in the sawmill industry makes it doubly important."

Under the mortgage lending program, the provincial government loaned $200 million to B.C. Central Credit Union to provide low-interest loans to first-time home-buyers.

As of May 15, 7,063 of the 50,000 International Woodworkers of America members in B.C. had been laid off, King said.

King also had harsh words for Forests Minister Tom Waterland who said idled employees should rely on unemployment insurance.

"This type of complacency is inappropriate for a provincial government," King said.

A-G weighs chief's words

Attorney-General Allan Williams Thursday glossed over controversial remarks about crime and politicians made by one of B.C.'s top law officials, saying they must be taken in context.

He refused however, to say that Robert Simson's recent statements were inoffensive, since the legislature's special committee on privilege has already objected to them.

"It's a matter which the committee is dealing with. I don't want them to suggest my comments are interfering with what they're doing," Williams said.

Simson, director of the Co-ordinated Law Enforcement Unit, said in an interview that organized crime needs to have pliable politicians in its pocket.

He pointed to the recent conviction of Surrey mayor Ed McKitka as proof that B.C. politicians can be receptive to approaches by criminals.

He also cited the conviction of two men for conspiring to bribe Consumer Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen as an argument for greater police freedom in the use of wiretaps.

Williams said he has met with Simson and studied the full text of the interview.

"When you have the full context of the statements you get a slightly different flavor," Williams said.

"As I understand it he was talking about politicians in the broader sense and was reflecting upon what has been the experience in the U.S."

He also said pliable may not have been the exact word used.

Now that he understands the full context, Williams said, he is not as distressed by the interview as he was when he first read it.

The committee on privileges is examining the RCMP bugging of Nielsen's office during the bribery conspiracy investigation, to see if it constitutes a breach of parliamentary privilege.

Committee members objected strongly to Simson's comments about wiretapping and politicians while the Nielsen case is still being considered.

One member said the CLEU chief should be cited for contempt.

When the committee meets again next week it will decide whether Simson will be called before it to defend his statements.

Protest rally set for June 16

Provincial government and other public sector employees will be asked to walk off the job in Victoria on the afternoon of June 16 to attend a rally protesting proposed changes to pension benefits.

The rally will be the last in a series of 17 to be held throughout the province beginning May 30 in Nelson.

All of the demonstrations will be held during working hours.

The Victoria-area public sector employees will gather in front of the legislature at 1 p.m. June 16 and then march to the McPherson Playhouse.

The rallies are being coordinated by the public sector committee of the B.C. Federation of Labor.

"The rallies are a political protest over high-handed government action that strikes at the very heart of our members' and retired members' financial security," Jack Adams, director of membership services for the B.C. Government Employees Union, said today.

The union wants the pension amendments withdrawn and a proper consultative process established, Adams said.

Other rallies will be held at the following places: Nelson, May 30; Prince George, Fort St. John, June 2; Prince Rupert, Terrace, June 3; Kamloops, Quesnel, Williams Lake, June 4; Vernon, Penticton, Kelowna, June 5; Courtenay, Nanaimo, June 6; Chilliwack, June 9, and Vancouver June 10.

Who needs it?

So far only two things have emerged clearly from the municipal fiasco over the Tillicum shopping centre. First, no matter which side wins the taxpayers will lose. Second, the relationships between the local politicians, on whose interactions we all depend for good government, may be permanently scarred.

The stubborn conviction of Saanich council that Cal Investments Ltd. should be allowed to build a 495,000 square foot plaza at the corner of Burnside and Tillicum, and the uncompromising position of the CRD that the plaza be limited to 295,000 square feet, are going to cost regional taxpayers a bundle in legal fees, to say nothing of the time wasted by local politicians and their staffs.

This is what all regional district and Saanich residents are paying for:

— Regional district lawyers petition the B.C. Supreme Court for a temporary injunction preventing Saanich issuing building permits to Cal Investments. (Granted.)

— Saanich lawyers join with Cal Investment lawyers to appeal the injunction.

— CRD lawyers defend it. (The injunction still stands, but further litigation will be required to determine whether it will become permanent.)

— Saanich lawyers petition for a temporary injunction prohibiting the CRD from passing its shopping centre bylaw. (Granted.)

— CRD lawyers will go before the bench to defend the bylaw which Cal Investments has challenged in a separate suit.

— Saanich lawyers are now determining the feasibility of countersuing the CRD for lost revenue from any delay in the Tillicum project.

— If that goes to court, CRD lawyers will be on hand to argue with Saanich's lawyers.

— If the municipality wins a damages suit, regional taxpayers end up footing the bill.

Saanich mayor Mel Couvelier understated the situation at Tuesday's council meeting. "It's become a legal morass where only the legal profession will win."

It's hardest on Saanich residents. They are paying not only for their municipality's legal sojourns, but also part of the CRD's legal fees. A double whammy.

What are Saanich and the CRD going to do about it? Nothing, it seems, that will lead to a cheap out-of-court agreement.

Also, the relationship between the CRD and Saanich council is at an all-time low.

CRD chairman Jim Campbell has accused Saanich of dragging its feet in the court by preventing the case from proceeding forward summarily, a procedure far more expeditious than a full trial. Now Couvelier says that it's the CRD that delaying a quick resolution and it's really Saanich who wants to proceed summarily. The gulf between Couvelier and Campbell, two of the key politicans involved in regional government, is growing wider by the day.

As if all of the foregoing isn't bad enough, Couvelier ended up calling Alderman John Mika a "sick man" at Tuesday's council meeting. The insult resulted from Mika's refusal to name a staff member who apparently failed to arrange a meeting with Saanich's lawyer to discuss the Tillicum court case.

An outrageous price is being paid for the Tillicum shopping centre, both in terms of dollars and goodwill between politicians. But surely the point has not been passed where clear heads and a responsibility to area taxpayers can prevail.

E & N orphan

Members of Victoria's Central Business District Advisory Committee outlined a significant problem this week when they complained about the limited service the E & N Railway was receiving from the national agency, VIA Rail.

Unfortunately, the solution they envisioned might worsen the problem.

Ald. John Cooper, head of the E & N Steering Committee told the city group that since taking over responsibility for the railway, VIA has apparently not been living up to its commitments.

It has not conducted a promised study on ways of linking the E & N with other transport systems on the Island, nor has it fulfilled a promise to relocate the Victoria terminal nearer downtown.

Quite simply, the 300-mile length of E & N track with its one return-trip a day on a dayliner isn't of great importance to a national agency trying to run passenger trains across 5,000 miles of country. The E & N will probably always get short shrift.

The CBD advisory committee thought that more local control would improve the situation, and it is probably right. Unfortunately, the agency it suggested is the Urban Transit Authority.

The Urban Transit Authority already has more problems than it needs in trying to manage the bus systems of Vancouver, Victoria and several smaller communities. It has no expertise in running railways. And in the future, it should be extremely busy planning expanded bus service in Interior communities, service improvements in Victoria and Vancouver and, it is hoped, a rapid transit system for the Lower Mainland.

In such a situation, the E & N might well become an orphan again. It would be an item of minor importance in the over-all budget and planning of an agency dealing with the many vagaries of urban transit.

The only difference would be that in that case it would be an orphan of an agency that knows nothing about railways rather than an orphan of an agency that at least possesses some expertise in passenger train travel.

JAMES RESTON

Graduating into uncertainty

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — The mood of this year's college graduates seems unusually sober. It ranges from passive skepticism to mocking cynicism and even to anxiety about another war.

They obviously have some special problems this year. Most of the million graduates will get jobs but probably not the jobs they want. At the present cost of money, housing, food and other essentials, it is not going to be easy to finance marriage — assuming that custom has not gone completely out of style. Also the class of '80 has had the bad luck to be liberated during a presidential election when everybody is talking nonsense and they are being asked to choose between Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan — which is no graduation present.

War-talk jitters

The war talk is not to be compared to the emotional uproar that swept the campuses during the Vietnam War. It is simply a feeling that things are not working well in Washington and that the nation is somehow slipping leaderless into some kind of confrontation with the Soviet Union. President Carter's call for military registration, his characterization of the Afghanistan invasion as the most serious crisis since the last world war, the demonstration of impotence and ineptness in Iran, have all contributed to a sense of uneasiness among the graduates.

It is clear that the ceaseless charges that the United States has lost or is about to lose its military superiority to the Soviet Union have also had a profound effect on the campuses. As a result this year's graduates seem to feel that they are emerging into a hostile world — and of course they're right. There never has been any other kind of world. But they seem to believe that this is a particularly unlucky time, and the guess here is that they may be wrong.

Unlike their fathers, they don't have to face a military draft and unlike their grandfathers they don't have to face a world war. Their problem is that they have to face freedom, and the complications of freedom. They hate this argument. But unlike previous generations they have so many choices of jobs in the day and partners in the night that they can't make up their minds where they're going or who's going with them. My own view, for what it's worth, is that they are excessively pessimistic even considering all their obvious problems. The country is in a dreadful economic pickle and most of the capitalist countries are in similar trouble. But the most serious crisis is in the Communist world.

Moscow can raise armies but it cannot feed its own people. It is falling steadily behind in the new computerized industrial and scientific world, and it is counting on the West and Japan for modern technology as it is depending on the United States, Canada, Argentina and Australia for its grain. Not even the Communist parties of Western Europe or the new developing nations even consider, let alone argue, that Moscow has an acceptable economic or social model for their societies. Cuba is only the latest example of the spectacular failure of the Communist system.

There is not, for example, a single instance of any refugees trying to get into the Soviet Union or Cuba. They are all running away. And Washington, for all its fumbles, still has better relations with Peking and Moscow than these two Communist giants have with one another. So in the wider perspectives of history, which a college education is supposed to provide, this time may not be as bad as the graduates fear.

In the first quarter of the 20th century we had the First World War, which crippled the old empires and Communized Russia. In the second quarter we had a worldwide depression and the Second World War, which destroyed the old empires and brought the Soviet Union, at the beginning of the atomic age, into the heart of Europe. In the third quarter we had the Korean and Vietnam Wars, which divided our people, especially on graduation day. It is hard for anybody who remembers those days to feel that the outlook for the rest of the century is nearly as bleak as the record of the first three quarters.

The graduates are about 22 years old now and will be in their 40's at the end of the century, when presumably they will be among the leaders of the republic. The guess here is that they will not see another world war between now and then.

Anti-Soviet mood

But there is a problem. The mood of the country is openly and increasingly anti-Soviet. Even Secretary of State Muskie's long talk with Andrei Gromyko last Friday was opposed by some influential officials of the Carter administration.

The maintenance of peace, however, depends not only on maintaining a balance of power with the Soviet Union but on achieving some kind of dialogue with the old leaders in Moscow, for they at least have memories of the horrors of the last world war, when they lost 30 million men and women.

The next generation of Soviet leaders may not be so easy to negotiate with — especially if they come to power in the hot, hostile atmosphere of a second cold war.

All from taxes

Taxes. What are taxes? They are monies paid by hardworking private companies and individuals to support and pay for most of the various governments' highly inefficient methods of providing service to us "the taxpayer," and to pay themselves a salary.

Why private individuals or companies? Well, if local, provincial or federal employees are paid their salaries from monies collected from taxes then obviously, the monies these persons pay in any and all taxes are only tax monies returned to the government.

This then concludes without any doubt that, all the monies our government truly collects comes from private enterprise.

To me this should clearly indicate that all levels of government should endeavor with all their might to support and assist private enterprise, their only means of tax revenue. By complicating the business of private enterprise, the government lowers the efficiency of private enterprise and thus reduce the national product. — Erik Hoel, 6866 Mark Lane.

Strong centre

A majority of Canadians seem to hold that we need a new constitution. I suspect that most of them have never read the present one but rather base their opinion on the constant bickering and unpleasantness going on between the two levels of government. My question is why have these disputes come about and to what extent is the British North America Act responsible for them?

Messrs. Macdonald, Tilley and Tupper, in an 1878 memorandum, stated that Canada "exists in the form of a powerful central government having already no less than seven subordinate local executive and legislative systems." Obviously times have changed since then but the trouble is that Ottawa's powers have been cut so that they now are roughly equivalent to that of the provinces. Hence the stalemate and the inability of either to get anything done without endless disputes and sometimes unsatisfactory results for either party. A good example is energy which has been wrangled about interminably with no end in sight.

One solution, favored by many, would increase the powers of the provinces to the point where they could dominate the federal authorities. Naturally enough, through self-interest, the premiers favor that response but it has its dangers for would they then be able to agree any more than they do now under their unanimity rule? Poland once had a council requiring unanimous consent before anything could be done and it was a total disaster. And would the national government remain anything but national in name?

The only solution which can work is the one which functioned so well in the early days of our union. That is for us to avoid speaking of the 11 governments as "equal partners" and recognize that there has to be a senior government with the power to make decisions affecting Canada as a whole. The premiers should concentrate on attending to the local needs of their own districts without forever trying to tell Ottawa what it should do. The latter has Parliament to look to, and it should not allow others to usurp its duties. Besides every province except P.E.I. (it has more) is represented by exactly its share of members on the basis of population. How else could it be done and remain democratic? — F. L. P. Anderson, 409-2174 Cadboro Bay Road.

Rent aid needed

The decision to allow landlords to increase rent from seven per cent to 10 per cent starting immediately comes as no surprise. This increase is justified because of the high cost of heating oil, maintenance of premises and staff wages. Also, recent settlements agreed upon by managements and workers do provide the latter with more income.

But what about retired taxpayers who do not live in subsidized senior citizens dwellings and do not "qualify" for any programs of rent aid? Many persons do prefer living in buildings with people from different age groups, and even if willing to move to "seniors" apartments, they wouldn't find anything available.

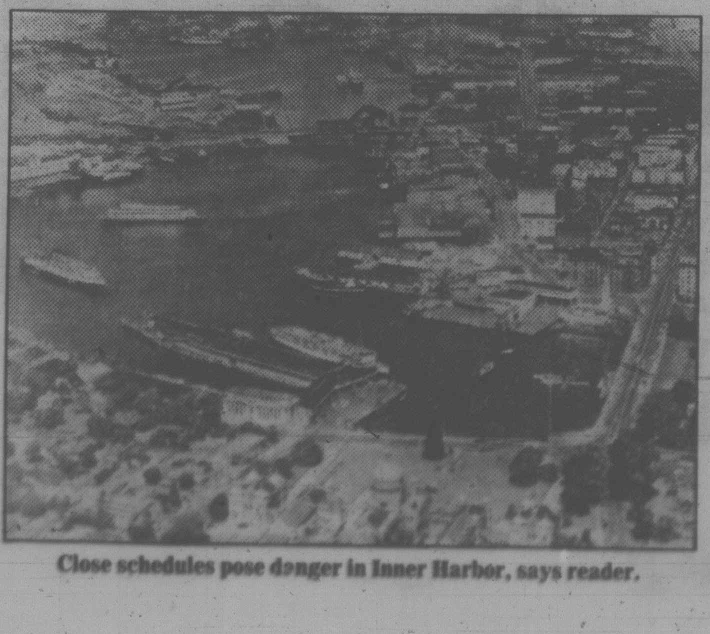
There is only one solution to this problem: increase the amount deductible from the income tax under the heading of rental grant, now standing at a ridiculous low maximum of an annual $150 that cannot be claimed by all senior citizens in its entirety.

The government of our neighbor province, Alberta, which is already giving a tax exemption of $500, is now considering new legislation which, if approved, will exactly double this tax exemption. That will provide approximately $82 monthly to enable senior citizens to face rent increases, higher cost of utilities, and so on.

That the B.C. government could not afford to apply Alberta's policy here is simply not true. This government is grabbing more revenue from individual provincial income tax and from many more sources.

Also, this government appears to find plenty of money for all sorts of costly projects, enterprises, etc. which, if successful, will benefit one segment of the population and certainly not the one that needs some help. Neither our premier nor our minister of finance have taken even a small step to consider the difficulties of persons who, with a very modest income, are placed on the same rental levels as those earning over $20,000 a year.

Perhaps the time has come when priorities should be reviewed and some just, reasonable, intelligent decisions made for the fiscal year 1980. All persons affected by new rental increases should not hesitate to write directly to those who have the authority to bring about some essential changes. — E. I. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Road.



Close schedules pose danger in Inner Harbor, says reader.

Treat sewage

Due to various factors, this city has no sewage treatment facilities. Consequently, all of the waste material, including many chemicals, is pumped directly into the ocean. This is obviously disgusting and should have been taken care of years ago.

But the Capital Region Board, headed by Jim Campbell, apparently will not consider alternatives to this disgraceful blight.

The only action being taken to change this idiocy is the plan to extend the Clover Point outfall pipe. All this means is that the waste will just go farther out into the ocean. But the brilliant planners seem to overlook the fact that tides bring the pollution back to the beaches, sooner or later — and even if it didn't pollute the beaches, think of all the fish that are being poisoned. Too many humans treat nature like a garbage dump, without considering the damage being done. This is a glaring example of that attitude.

The main argument against setting up a sewage treatment plant is that "it would cost too much." Another argument is that it would be hard to find land to build it on.

First of all, the Clover Point extension will cost $4 million, maybe more. There are proven sewage treatment methods which can transform waste into excellent fertilizer and methane gas. These products could be marketed to make a lot of the money back. Not only would it be healthier but ultimately more economical.

Secondly, a land-fill project could easily be set up at Clover Point, a man-made extension of the shoreline could provide enough room for the treatment plant.

Thirdly, both the land-fill project and the treatment plant itself would provide much-needed employment in Victoria.

It's high time that the narrow-minded attitude of the Capital Region Board was changed. It's time to stop putting expediency ahead of a healthy environment. If we're not careful, one day it'll really be too late to undo the damage. — D. Dawes, 948 Fort Street.

Local thrills

Often on Friday after work, I go with friends to share some good times and a few drinks in the lounge of a local restaurant with a particularly good view of the Inner Harbor. On May 16 I sat on the edge of my chair, gripped the table with paled knuckles and with an incredulous stare took in a drama that I'm sure will not be the last of its type to be seen from that window this year.

Just as the "familiar ferry" carrying tourists and homecomers from Port Angeles arrived at the entrance to the harbor, that other lacklustre craft, masquerading as the Marguerite, tried to make its exit. The people in the room grew quiet and anxiously waited for a successful evasion of disaster. Suddenly without hesitation, a woman with a ring-side seat stood up and yelled out, "Oh no, here comes Air West." The pilot, unable to change direction, disappeared with his plane and passengers behind the docking Coho. Moments later, the boat motored into its berth and we all breathed easier to see the float plane at a dead stop and sideways to its dock. Its engines started again only to cut out once more to allow a yellow sailboat under power to cross its path without the right of way. Meanwhile, the Flying Princess, puffed up with energy was manoevering to a take-off position.

This scene offers tremendous potential to those people who enjoy spending every cent they have on bumper cars at the PNE, or who sit with drink in hand waiting for bedlam in contact spectator sports or who think that they'll be the next person to make a million by writing the script for a disaster movie.

Victoria Princess leaves at 6 p.m., Flying Princess leaves at 6:30 p.m., Air West arrives at 6:35 p.m., Coho arrives at 6:45 p.m. and this is Swiftsure Weekend. I may sell tickets at the door. — K. Bishop, James Bay.

Making autos without people

By WILLIAM H. CHAPMAN

ZAMA, Japan — The way they turn out Datsun motor cars in a sprawling plant here does not allow much of a margin for human error. But then, there aren't many humans around to make mistakes.

Inside the body assembly plant, for example, the visitor looks past lines of moving cars, down aisles half the length of a football field, and sees no one. Here and there are small groups of workers watching in case the machines do something wrong. Occasionally one spots an employee actually touching hands to metal.

But that is an exception. Ninety-seven per cent of the work in Nissan Motor Co.'s Zama plant is performed by machines, making it the world's most automated car assembly line. On an average day more than 1,300 cars come rolling off that line. On an average shift, it is manned by exactly 67 workers.

'Metallic ducks'

Instead of people, there are robots — swivelling machines bobbing and weaving as they weld parts together, like so many metallic ducks pecking away at food troughs.

Roofs are welded tight to the body and doors are bolted on without anyone even bothering to watch. Tiny television cameras tell computers when the parts supplies are dwindling and new batches are rolled automatically into place.

American visitors are astonished. Former U.S. labor secretary William Usery, now a consultant, expressed amazement after a trip through the Zama plant, recently opened to outsiders. "It makes you wonder — how do we ever compete?" he said.

The Zama plant, 22 miles south of Tokyo, is a battlefront in the coming war for world automobile dominance, a war of precision, uniform quality, low labor costs and, above all, high rates of productivity.

In the past two decades, much of the Japanese superiority in everything from television sets to steel sheets has been attributed to the supposedly happy, docile worker who loyally sings his company's songs and swims contentedly in the company pool in off-hours.

But increasingly, Japan is replacing those cheerful workers with machines or assigning them to watch and repair machines. The result is a steadily rising productivity that is the envy of the industrial world. Fewer people producing more things is the dream of managers everywhere, and in Japan they find it closer to reality.

A Western expert in technology who has watched Japan's automation and productivity grow recalls: "Engineers come here from all over the world, and the thing they always say is, 'there aren't any people.'"

It is true of autos, steel, electronics and just about everything that is made on a large scale in Japan. Usery recently visited a Nippon Steel factory. "It was downright scary," he recalled later. "We walked for great distances down those aisles and we didn't see anybody."

The experience has reinforced his judgment that the United States has slipped far behind in automation and productivity.

"They are outproducing us in many areas," said Usery, who is a board member of the American Productivity Centre. "They (Japanese) spent a lot of money to get this way. We know that their productivity rate exceeds ours."

Here are a few rudimentary benchmarks on the automation march in Japan:

● With the exception of 1974, a recession year, Nissan's plant here has increased production annually for seven years. But the number of employees has not increased at all.

● Nissan moved its pickup-truck factory from this site in 1977 to a new location in Kyushu and installed the latest in robotics. The factory now produces the same number of trucks as before with half the employees.

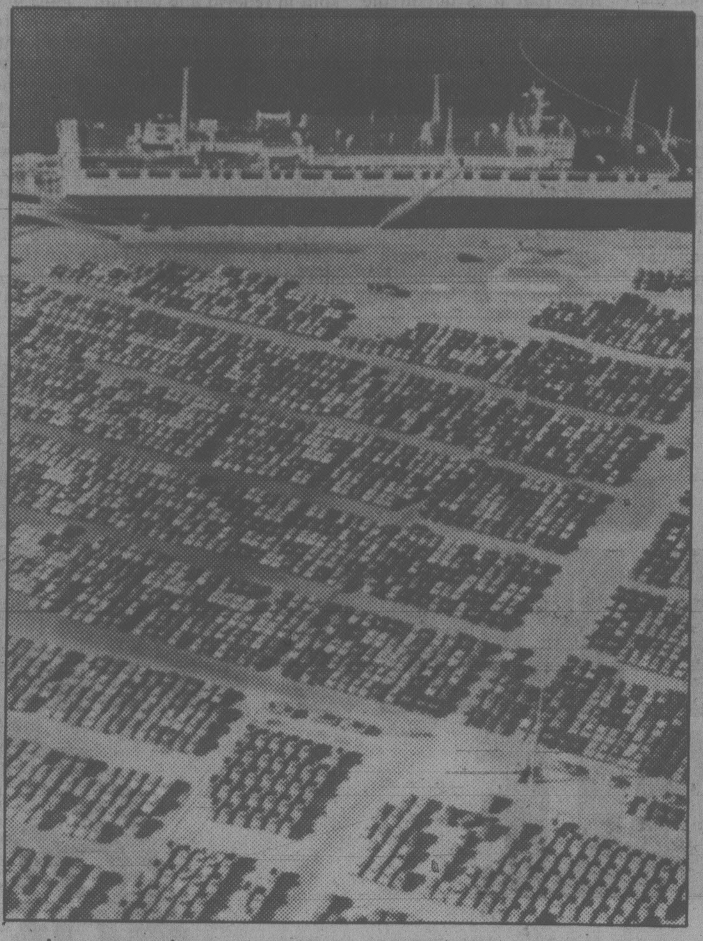
● Norman Macrae, an authority on Japanese industry for The Economist magazine, recently resurveyed the state of the art here and compared a Japanese car factory with British Leyland. We found that the productivity per man in Japan is four times greater than in British Leyland and probably will double within the next five years.

Ahead of others

Precise productivity comparisons are hard to find. In surveys that compare car manufacturers according to units turned out per worker, Japan turns up with an embarrassingly large lead over both American and European companies. But the comparison is crude and inexact because much of the work done in other nations' factories is done in Japan outside of the plant by subcontractors.

Toyota, Japan's biggest carmaker, devised a formula to measure the amount of value added by each worker in assembly plants. Japan was far ahead of Europe by that gauge but just abut even with manufacturers in the United States.

Japan usually is acknowledged to be far in front on one of the major ingredients of productivity; investment in new, automated equipment. It may or may not have a lead in the science of robotics but its application of these inventions is widespread. Faith in the value of new equipment is a cardinal principle.



Japanese import cars crowd dock at Los Angeles

"Whenever there is money, invest it in machinery," was the rule formulated by Toyota founder Sakichi Toyoda, and most other successful Japanese industrialists have heeded his words.

In the steel industry, for example, Japan makes far greater use of efficient oxygen furnaces than does the U.S. industry. The result is higher productivity. One 1976 analysis said the average Japanese steelworker produces 400 tons of steel a year while his American counterpart produced only 250 tons. Modernization made steel production 30 per cent less costly than in the United States.

Beginning this year, the government will help small and medium-sized businesses make the same kinds of investment in new equipment that the Nissans and Toyotas have made. A special tax depreciation allowance of 13 per cent will be granted to the smaller firms which buy robots to replace dangerous and difficult jobs.

The results of Japan's reinvestments are seen in the steadily rising productivity tables. Productivity in manufacturing industries rose 12.3 per cent in 1976, 5.1 per cent in 1977 and 8 per cent in 1978. According to one report, it rose another 12 per cent in 1979.

In contrast, the U.S. Labor Department reported recently that in 1979 the output per hour of work among major American manufacturers actually fell by 0.4 per cent.

Japanese automakers insist that automation in itself is not always automatically a good thing. "The important thing is flexible automation now," said one executive.

That principle is reflected in the Nissan plant here. It is in part an experimental plant geared to the coming world car competition, and one example of flexible robotics makes Nissan's point. It is the newest welding robots which can be programmed by computers to vary their work according to what needs to be done. The old multi-welders were fixed machines which could work only on one model of car.

The distinction is of enormous importance. It means a single Nissan plant in, say, Indonesia could be geared to turn out several models of cars instead of only one, an advantage that may make a crucial difference in who controls that market.

"That's it!" he said.

We listened, waiting for the drum-roll to be repeated, hoping to get a better idea of its location, but there was nothing.

I figured it had come from farther up the slope. Neither Rob nor Dick — two of the Cannings boys from Penticton — seemed to disagree, so we started moving in that direction.

About 100 feet farther on we came to the dead rampike of what had once been a larch. Now it was an ideal place for a woodpecker to perform its resonant territorial drum-roll.

Again, after searching that tree from top to bottom, and from all sides — our quarry had a reputation for keeping to the far side of his drumming tree when intruders appeared — there was nothing.

Again, the three of us stood quietly waiting for another clue to bringing our search to a fruitful conclusion. And again there was nothing. Oh, there was the distant call of a Red-breasted Nuthatch, and a Yellow-rumped Warbler sang briefly. But of our quarry, nothing.

We'd probably only waited a minute or so — it seemed like several — and had just begun to speculate among ourselves about our chances, when a distant queeer, quee-er, quee-er stopped us in half stride. It sounded like a Red-headed Woodpecker to me, but I kept the idea to myself — after all, on top of Anarchist Mountain near Osoyoos we were a good 1,000 miles from any self-respecting Red-headed Woodpecker.

As for Rob and Dick, they seemed confused. The sound was not like any they knew.

Again we waited and, again, nothing.

Despite the sound seeming to be far away, we decided to try and track it down. I threw out my idea about Red-headed Woodpeckers and was politely ignored. Dick began speculating on the call, trying, it seemed to me, to convince himself that it might have been made by our elusive drummer.

We hadn't gone far, picking our way through the open stand of Douglas fir, yellow pine and larch that are the signatures of this kind of high, arid forest, when another burst of drumming — this time from behind us — stopped us again.

It seemed to come from near that tall snag we had checked out earlier. Without comment, we turned back and homed on that tree. Rob ended up on its north side, Dick and I to the southeast — an unforgivable sin for a birdwatcher because we found ourselves looking directly into the sun.

While Dick and I began to work ourselves into a better position, Rob worked up the snag with his binoculars. But before we were all in position, Rob had the bird.

"There it is," he called. And Dick and I, almost in unison, said "Where?"

"About 20 feet from the top," Rob answered.

I brought my glasses up to the spot, and there, partially silhouetted against the sun, was a woodpecker.

Afraid to move to a better angle in case the bird flew off, I backed slightly to get the snag between me and the sun. It was just enough to let me get a good look at the bird.

What I saw was a woodpecker — a little smaller than a flicker — with a black head and back, a strong white flash on its closed wing, two white stripes on the side of its head, a red throat, and a pale yellow belly.

Just as I completed my inventory, the bird dropped from the tree and raced off through the woods calling "quee-er, quee-er, quee-er." It was our quarry — a Williamson's Sapsucker, probably the rarest woodpecker in Canada!

Dick, your Dad's on time

NEW YORK — The New York Times apologized the other day to the father of Dick Tracy, Chester Gould. It had referred to him as "the late Chester Gould," intimating that he was dead. Gould pointed out since he was amused about having his decease alluded to in the newspaper of record, he was almost certainly alive, amusement being a pleasure not available to late people.

The Times apologized, and before somebody presses me to do likewise for calling Gould the father of Dick Tracy, I want to make it clear that I am not speaking of fatherhood in the biological sense, but in the Edward Teller sense.

Teller, as everyone knows, is the father of the H-bomb, just as surely as George Washington is the father of his country. Fatherhood of this kind is granted to few, no matter how great their fatherings may be. Thomas Edison, for instance, has never become the father of the light bulb and President Eisenhower has never become father of the interstate highway system.

There is no explaining this, just as there is no explaining why necessity is universally recognized as the mother of invention while taxation is never referred to as the mother of poverty.

But I wander. The point is that granting Gould the fatherhood of Dick Tracy is intended as a tribute putting him in a class with Teller, and possibly a notch higher since Gould's boy, Dick, has created far more late people than Teller's hydrogen-headed offspring.

Which brings us to the bigger point; namely, why did The New York Times, in its erroneous belief that Gould was dead, feel obliged to call him "the late Chester Gould"? Or, to broaden the philosophical question, what is late about being dead?

Most of us have known people who became dead, but we never think of them as being late. If somebody you knew died four years ago and a friend you haven't seen for years asks, "What ever became of Old So-and-So?" you don't say, "Why, didn't you hear? He's been late for the past four years."

Also, nobody ever refers to "the late Julius Caesar" or calls George Washington "the late father of his country." Why, then, do people apply the "late" form to persons of such recent vintage that, like Gould, they may still be alive?

The answer lies in the subconscious insecurity of the living. The world is full of people who were famous when we were young, but as the years pass and these celebrities slide into normal human anonymity and our youth begins to seem like something that happened back in the Thirty Years War, we forget them.

Then one day some event recalls one of them to mind. "Is he still alive?" we ask ourselves and realize that we have come to think of this famous, forgotten old party as dead.

I am often startled to open the newspaper and read that just yesterday somebody died who, I thought, had been dead for years. This experience gives you two jolts of news for the price of one: first, the discovery that somebody you had thought dead for years was really alive, and second, the news that he had died.

After a while this happens so frequently that you become uncertain about who is still alive and who is dead. This is a fairly broad hint that your mind is losing its youthful muscularity and can no longer keep up with the rush of history.

At this point you have a choice. You may recognize that you are beginning to run down like everybody else your age and are hastening toward your own lateness. Or you can pretend that though you may be aging, you're still better off than your elders because most of them are dead.

The fact that most of them aren't dead has nothing to do with the exercise. Its success depends upon your thinking they're dead. Once you cultivate this habit, however, it is hard to keep the facts straight in your head. As a result, if you are careless when referring to somebody a generation older you wind up calling him "the late."

What is revealed here is the natural tendency of aging people to betray their own fears of the future by publicly referring to their elders as gone.

The question whether The New York Times should have apologized to Gould for calling him "late" is something else. Even though Gould is not late, there is nothing shameful about the condition, and false reports that one suffers from it cannot do a person much harm, except possibly for reducing the influx of dinner invitations and bargain subscription offerings at miraculously reduced prices. Some people would regard this as a blessing.

Delay urged in cable TV merger decision

VANCOUVER (CP) — A plan by Canadian Cablesystems Ltd. of Toronto to expand into a variety of non-broadcast services should not be approved until debate over the future of such services is settled, Don Cruikshank, president of the Canadian Telecommunications Carriers Association, said Thursday.

Cruikshank, appearing before a Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission hearing into a bid by CCL to take over Premier Communications Ltd. of Vancouver, said approval would pre-judge fundamental changes which may be coming in telecommunications policy.

The merged companies would have more than one million subscribers, about 28 per cent of the Canadian total.

The association, which includes the country's telephone and telecommunications companies, does not oppose CCL's $86.5 million bid to take control of Premier but is concerned that the proposal would also allow the cablevision firm into non-program broadcast services such as fire and security alarms and medical alert systems.

Cruikshank said that Ted Rogers, CCL's chief executive officer, was proposing that, if the bid is approved, the cablevision firm would become "a common carrier of all sorts of signals to and from the home and work place."

"The association submits that it is not in the public interest to have these fundamental issues decided as a collateral part of the Rogers application and asks that there be public hearings by appropriate bodies on the future of telecommunications."

Cruikshank said the CCL proposal suggests a redefinition of cable television and said that non-program services might be beyond the powers of cable companies.

He noted there now is a split in federal and provincial jurisdiction over telecommunications, that a federal-provincial study is being made of cable regulation and that a revised telecommunications act had been before the last Parliament and might be reintroduced.

MLA Frank Mitchell (NDP — Esquimalt-Port Renfrew) told the CRTC his party feels it is wrong that a Toronto-owned conglomerate should take control of B.C.'s largest company in the field.

"We feel it is unhealthy," said Mitchell, who also referred to current moves by the federal government to turn over some regulation to the provinces.

Representatives of three Toronto-area cablevision companies came to support the bid, saying part of the plan was a rationalization of the patchwork boundaries among cable firms in Greater Toronto.

Stolen car lands in Durrance Lake

Victoria area police are looking for youths who ditched a stolen car in Durrance Lake Thursday night.

A Sidney RCMP spokesman said a fisherman saw the car plunge into the lake and spotted the youths running away.

The incident occurred shortly after 8 p.m.

Two Canadian Forces divers were sent to the scene and located the car, a red 1970 Mazda. They found no one inside.

The car had been stolen from a Blanshard Street parking lot sometime between Tuesday and Thursday.

Escaped rapist gets 14 years

VANCOUVER (CP) — An escaper from a U.S. prison who raped two women last August in the south Vancouver area was sentenced Thursday to 14 years in prison.

B.C. Supreme Court was told that Robert James Watson, 36, escaped from the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre (Oakalla) in Burnaby in 1976 and went to the U.S. where he was sentenced to 20 years for rape in Idaho. He escaped from there and came back to B.C. where he committed the attacks on the two women.

Watson used a ruse to gain entry to the residence of a 19-year-old girl, forced her at knifepoint to accompany him in his car where he raped her. A few days earlier he had broken into the house occupied by a 39-year-old woman and raped her.

Iranian students off to U.K.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four of the five Iranian students stranded in Canada when President Jimmy Carter closed the United States border to Iranians have gone to England where they will continue their studies.

The five University of Idaho architecture students were in Vancouver on a field trip when Carter imposed his ban. They then were denied admission at the University of B.C.

A Canadian immigration official said Thursday the four have been accepted by the Architectural Association's school of architecture in London.

The fifth student, who was not identified by the immigration spokesman, remains in Vancouver and has married a U.S. citizen.

Unions ready for strike vote

VANCOUVER (CP) — As contract talks in the B.C. construction industry progress at a slow rate, leaders of the unions representing 45,000 building tradesmen visited the B.C. Labor Relations Board on Thursday to discuss procedure for a strike vote.

Roy Gautier, president of the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council, said the 17 unions "have not made an absolute decision" to conduct a strike vote, but want to prepare for one in case it becomes necessary.

Because of the complexity of the procedure for government-supervised strike votes under provincial law, and the "literally hundreds and hundreds of contractors involved," Gautier said the unions are asking the board to use its authorized discretion to ease the regulations.

He said the regulations are designed for votes at individual plants, while the construction unions have members at many job sites throughout B.C.

With the regulations eased, the vote still would take at least two weeks, he said.

UBC, CUPE reach accord

VANCOUVER (CP) — The University of B.C. and the Canadian Union of Public Employees reached tentative agreement Thursday on a new contract.

University spokesman R. A. Grant said details will not be released until after the contract is ratified.

He said negotiators for both sides are recommending acceptance to replaced the agreement which ended March 31.

The union represents 1,700 university employees.

Vogel warns of racial strife

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver is a city with a racial mix "as complex and distorted as any in the country" and, says deputy attorney general Richard Vogel, that could spell trouble.

Vogel, speaking Thursday to about 100 delegates at a banquet of the police educator's annual conference, said it is up to them to select and train policemen who can handle the complex role of a modern, urban social worker as well as arrest criminals.

Vogel read excerpts from a speech he said was made by a Toronto mayor who "was charging the police force with the most serious of possible abuses — the unnecessary killing of a man.

"It is terribly important, in my view, that no other mayor should be able (because of such a killing) to make that kind of speech," Vogel said.

He added that police forces in B.C. have achieved "a very high plateau of proficiency" in dealing with racial issues.

$4.5M ferry dock okayed

Construction work on a $4.5 million ferry terminal dock at Graham Island in the Queen Charlotte Islands will begin next week with the job expected to be completed by September, the transportation ministry said Thursday.

The dock will be the Queen Charlotte Islands terminal of the Skidegate-Prince Rupert ferry service due to begin in October.

Forest funding renewal urged

CRANBROOK (CP) — The B.C. forest service wants the provincial government to renew a federal-provincial agreement which pours $4 million a year into development of Crown range land, Deputy Forests Minister Mike Apsey said Thursday.

UBC sets record for grads

VANCOUVER (CP) — A record 3,591 students will receive academic degrees at the University of B.C.'s three-day spring congregation May 28 to 30, with the largest group receiving bachelor of arts degrees.

This year's winner of the Governor-General's gold medal is Anne Gardner of Coquitlam, B.C., who receives her Honors B.Sc. in mathematics with an average of 96 per cent on her final exams.

B.C. Hydro projects rapped

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Hydro power projects came under attack Thursday as both an environmental group and the Nishga tribal council voiced opposition to dam site proposals.

Speaking in Kelowna, Michael Anderson, spokesman for the B.C. Energy Coalition, said thousands of acres of prime farm land will be ruined and 650 people will be displaced if B.C. Hydro builds its planned major power projects in the Peace River valley.

Anderson and 15 other Vancouver-area environmentalists stopped here on a 1,900-kilometre bus trip to the Peace River area designed to draw attention to Hydro's planned damming and flooding projects in the Fort. St. John area.

"What we're looking at is the wholesale flooding of the major river systems of B.C.," said Anderson.

Anderson said the Site C power project proposed for northeast B.C. is designed to provide hydro power to the U.S.

"The utility companies in Washington and the west coast of the U.S. know they can't possibly meet the increasing demand for hydro power in the future. B.C. Hydro knows it too and it knows it can be an OPEC for selling power to the U.S."

In Vancouver, meanwhile, the Nishga tribal council was informed that B.C. Hydro is not planning a dam on the Nass River.

Hydro chairman Robert Bonner denied any plans to dam the river in a letter Nishga tribal council president James Gosnell received Thursday.

Gosnell had written Bonner, Premier Bill Bennett, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and others involved in land claims of the Nishga Indians protesting a report by provincial member Al Passerell (NDP — Atlin) that Hydro had long-range plans to dam the river that flows to the coast north of Prince Rupert.

A resolution passed at the Nishga tribal convention at Kincolith, B.C., last month expressed total opposition by the Nishga people to damming the Nass, and also opposed Hydro's Stikine River project and the Aluminum Co. of Canada's Kemano II development.

Bonner replied that he is dismayed at the report.

"The information you have received is in error and I can assure you that B.C. Hydro's current plans do not include a dam on the Nass River," the letter states.

WHY DO YOU SMOKE?

If you're a smoker, you know that smoking a cigarette can be one of those rare and pleasurable moments.

And the chances are you don't want to give up any of that, even if you are becoming more and more concerned about smoking.

Which brings us to Vantage.

Vantage is the cigarette for people who may have had second thoughts about smoking and are looking for a way to do something about it.

Vantage cuts down substantially on what you may not want, without cutting out that satisfying tobacco flavour you've come to appreciate.

Now Vantage isn't the only cigarette of its kind you can smoke, but it may well be the only one you'll enjoy.

To put it simply, Vantage still tastes like a cigarette.

Noted Manitoban gets education post

A B.C. native well-known in Manitoba education administration will become director of instruction for Greater Victoria School District's support services this summer.

Dr. Ella Mary Lamb was chosen from more than 65 applicants for the position which will involve evaluation of special education services and implementation of the school board's policy of a home-school team approach to providing them.

At present Lamb is deputy assistant superintendent of student services for the Assiniboine South School Division in Winnipeg.

She has been an active counsellor and consultant to the juvenile crime sections of RCMP and municipal police forces, to the Manitoba health and social development department and Manitoba education ministry.

Her experience in both provinces includes teaching, counselling and administration at elementary, secondary and university levels and in adult education.

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — About 30 people have been arrested in Rwanda in an alleged plot to overthrow the government of President Juvenal Habyarimana, South African radio has reported.

$50,000 offered to ship cannabis

The captain of the Panamanian-registered freighter Samarkanda said Thursday he was offered $50,000 to ship a cargo of cannabis from an air drop 50 miles off the coast of Colombia to a delivery point 200 miles west of Juneau, Alaska.

Marco Antonio Lopera Penagos, 60, of Mellin, Colombia, said the offer was made by Jaime Marin, 39, of Marina del Rey, Calif., while he was in the United States in early 1979 and repeated later by a man he called Ramon Castano in Santa Marta, Colombia.

Penagos told a county court jury he had first agreed to an offer of $2,000 a month by Marin to skipper the Samarkanda from Salina Cruz, Mexico, to Colombia to haul lumber.

He later agreed to head the cannabis cargo voyage on condition that pickup and delivery would be on the high seas and that he would have Americans as navigator, radio operator and engineer because of their technical knowledge and language.

Penagos, Marin and six other men are accused of importing 33.5 tons of cannabis marijuana into Canada a year ago and possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

Penagos said he was out of work at the end of 1978 and met an old friend who said he might be able to find him a job for someone who had a boat in Mexico.

He went to Mexico and then to Los Angeles where he met Marin. He accepted a job offer to skipper the Samarkanda for hauling lumber and said he would think about an offer to transport a cargo of cannabis. He accompanied Marin to look at vessels in San Francisco and Seattle and met fellow defendants William Terry Hines, 39, of San Rafael, Calif., the engineer, and William Francis Perka, 35, of Port Townsend, Wash., the navigator.

Penagos said Marin gave him $40,000 for operating expenses and he paid $28,000 to fuel the Samarkanda in Salina Cruz and another $10,000 to $12,000 to top her up at Tumaco, Colombia.

The Samarkanda arrived in Tumaco March 11 and Penagos telephoned a number he had been given and was told to get a larger crew than the eight who sailed south and to wait for a phone call.

He was contacted next by Castano and flew to Santa Marta to meet him. He made the same offer as Marin. On his way back he picked up two Americans, Perka and radio operator Stephen Earl Johnson, 34, of Port Townsend, who is also standing trial.

Penagos said he obtained two documents from the Tumaco port captain, one showing a Juneau destination and the other Mazatlan, Mexico. He said the second document was a precaution in case the coast guard stopped the Samarkanda while she was empty off the coast of Colombia.

The voyage began April 6 with a crew of 19 including himself after the Colombian navy searched the Samarkanda. She took up a position 50 miles west of Cape Mangales and waited for a DC6 aircraft to drop more than 600 bales. The vessel left the drop zone April 30.

Penagos will continue his testimony when the trial resumes Monday.

Ian Alexander Smart, an expert in marine engineering, told the jury that even with both engines running as the Samarkanda approached Sydney Inlet 50 kilometres northwest of Tofino it was still prudent to seek shelter because only temporary repairs had been made.

He also said that after the Samarkanda was grounded in No Name Bay at the head of Sydney Inlet as the tide went out, it was prudent to unload the cargo because of the list. From photographs he had seen, she was very close to rolling over.

An expert in marine navigation, Geoffrey Vale, said if he had been the captain and the engineer came to him with problems described in court by Hines, he would have headed for land.

He said it was a prudent decision and it would be courting disaster for the Samarkanda to heave-to at sea with both engines shut down while repairs were made.

Vale said it was a very good idea to unload the cargo because that would remove the weight which was tending to capsize the vessel.

Execution halted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The scheduled May 29 execution of convicted Utah murderer Pierre Dale Selby was postponed indefinitely by Supreme Court Justice Byron White.

Morphine charges

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two men have been charged with trafficking after police seized 30 ounces of high-grade morphine.

An RCMP spokesman said street value of the drug is estimated at $2.5 million.

Avtar Singh Bal, 28, of Delta, is charged with three counts of trafficking in morphine, one count of importing morphine, and one count of conspiracy to import morphine.

Anarjit Singh Saran, 31, of Mission, is charged with one count of trafficking in morphine.

Police said the drug was hidden in the soles and heels of shoes delivered to Canada by a courier from India.

Before the judge

Whose marijauna was it?

Judge Harold Alder was left wondering Thursday who owns the mysterious four baggies of marijuana.

The ownership question came up in Victoria provincial court after a 17-year-old Sidney youth, Ian William Wood, of 2300 Beacon, pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana.

Crown counsel George Jones said Wood was picked up by Sidney RCMP April 18 and an 8-gram baggie of marijuana was found on him. A further four baggies, containing another 20 grams, was found in the search of a vehicle.

Wood admitted that he had the one baggie on him but knew nothing of the other four baggies in the vehicle.

"It wasn't your car?" Alder asked.

"No, it wasn't," Wood replied.

At that point, Jones interrupted.

"It was a police car."

Alder gave the youth the benefit of the doubt and handed him a $75 fine.

A young purse-snatcher was given a 12-month jail sentence and a year's probation by Judge Harold Alder in Victoria provincial court Thursday.

Robert Andrew Rac, 20, of 820 Fisgard, pleaded guilty May 2 to robbery with violence and was remanded until Thursday for a pre-sentence report and sentencing.

Crown counsel Don Laughton told the court 69-year-old Florence Purser got off the bus and was walking in the 1100-block Esquimalt when she had her purse grabbed and was knocked down by Rac.

Tony Steele, a passing motorist, stopped his vehicle, got out and gave chase and was joined by off-duty Esquimalt police constable Iain Hooey.

Rac was captured and the purse, containing about $40, was recovered.

Rac told officers he was on welfare, was broke and needed some money.

He had three previous convictions this year, two for obtaining food by fraud and one for theft under $200. The last conviction was on March 5 when he received a seven-day term for the theft.

The pre-sentence report stated Rac was a glue sniffer and was involved in the use of alcohol, giving him some serious neurological problems.

Two persons were given prison terms for drinking-driving offences.

Mary Ellen Bruce, 21, of 485 Island Highway, was given a three-month term after pleading guilty to impaired driving, her third drinking-driving offence in slightly over three years.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Bruce was stopped on the Trans Canada Highway near Millstream about 7:45 p.m. May 14 after police noticed she was going about 30 km/h in an 80 km/h zone. Mulligan said she also hit a sign while pulling over.

Bruce had two Ontario convictions in 1977.

Bruce, who was also charged with possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking, pleaded guilty to the lesser-included offence of simple possession.

Crown counsel George Jones said 13 baggies of the narcotic, each weighing about eight grams, were found in her possession.

Alder handed out a concurrent seven-day sentnece for the drug offence.

Erroll Victor Allard, 22, of the Canadian Forces, was given a 14-day sentence after pleading guilty to impaired driving.

Court was told Allard was stopped on Elk Lake Drive about midnight April 26 after it was noted he weaved over the centre line to the gravel shoulder.

Subsequent breath test readings of .21 and .19 were obtained, Mulligan stated.

Fined $400 for drinking-driving offences were Jacob Dyrland, 62, of 1289 Camrose; Dennie Gordon Riehl, 21, of 840 Craigflower; Brian Raymond Laviolette of Port Alberni and Rebecca Jane Denise Torra, 25, of 70 Gorge Rd. West.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market was up sharply in active mid-afternoon trading.

The Toronto Stock Exchange said trading in Ronalds-Federated Ltd., which was halted late Thursday, resumed at the opening but there were no trades by 2 p.m. The stock last traded at $27.

The Ontario Securities Commission rejected an application by Newsco Investments Ltd. for an exemption from making a follow-up offer to minority shareholders of Ronalds-Federated.

Newsco has bought 51.6 per cent of Ronalds-Federated from Thomson Newspapers Ltd. for $30 a share.

Trading in shares of Standard Industries Ltd., which was halted May 19, resumed at 12:30 p.m. and the company's class A stock was up ½ to $8 by 2 p.m.

The Ontario Securities Commission ordered Canada Cement Lafarge Ltd. to suspend its trading in shares of Standard until Canada Cement provides an independent evaluation of Standard or abandons its takeover bid.

Canada Cement holds 70 per cent of Standard's shares and has offered $7.50 a share for the remainder.

Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prices were mixed in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Of the stocks that traded, 136 advanced, 114 declined and 164 remained unchanged.

B.C. Resources Investment Corp. led trading in the industrials and lost .05 to $6¼ on 19,890 shares. Great National Land was unchanged at $1.20 on 3,400 shares, Taro Industries was steady at $4.50 on 1,900 and Daon Development Corp. was unchanged at $7⅜ on 900. TDI Venture preferred A was steady at .45 and Canadian Javelin Ltd. gained .05 to $1.25.

Amflo Petroleum was the volume leader among resource issues and was unchanged at $3 on 310,700 shares. Zone Petroleum dropped .04 to $2.40 on 111,900 shares, United Westland Warrants advanced .05 to .80 on 38,100 and Kandahar Resources rose .02 to $1.55 on 25,533. Colby Resources gained .03 to $2.58 and Laredo Petroleum advanced .05 to $2.25.

Pilgrim Petroleum led traders on the curb exchange, and gained .20 to $1.50 on 51,200 shares. Tracer Resources advanced .16 to $2.01 on 31,400 shares, Ark Energy warrants rose .04½ to .35 on 23,600 and Jalna Resources gained .09 to $1.35 on 21,000. Morning Star Warrants declined .02¼ to a quarter of a cent and River Mountain Resources gained .05 to .47.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rose in fairly active trading as major U.S. banks sharply lowered a key business loan rate and the government announced the slowest monthly inflation increase in more than a year.

Citibank, the second largest U.S. bank, dropped its prime lending rate Friday, which applies to business loans, an extraordinary two percentage points to 14½ per cent. A number of other banks quickly followed that lead.

Banking and financial issues were generally higher. Beneficial Corp. rose ½ to $23, Chase Manhattan ¼ to $42½, Citicorp ⅜ to $21⅜ and BankAmerica ¼ to $25¼. Household Finance slipped ⅛ to $17¼.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — The London stock market was mixed near the close of trading.

The Financial Times index dropped 3.2 to 423.3.

Equities declined while golds moved higher.

Bonds

TORONTO (CP) — Prices rose in active trading on the Canadian bond market Thursday. The short end of the market was up 20 cents. Mid-, long-term, provincial and corporate issues fell one-quarter of a point. Day-to-day money was available at 14 per cent. Three-month treasury bills traded at an average of 11.58 per cent, down from 13.09 last week, and six-month bills at 10.72 per cent, down from 11.68 per cent.

B.C. Bank lops rates

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Bank of British Columbia reduced its prime interest rate Thursday by one per cent to 14¾ effective immediately.

The bank said in a news release that prime rate for small and intermediate businesses requiring operating credits up to $250,000, which has been maintained at half of one per cent below the bank's current prime, will be eliminated.

The move follows a drop Thursday in the Bank of Canada rate to 13.1 per cent from 14.1 per cent, the first time the central bank rate has fallen below 14 per cent where it stood when the bank rate was allowed to float at the beginning of March.

Interest rates now are determined weekly on the basis of interest rates set for federal treasury bills.

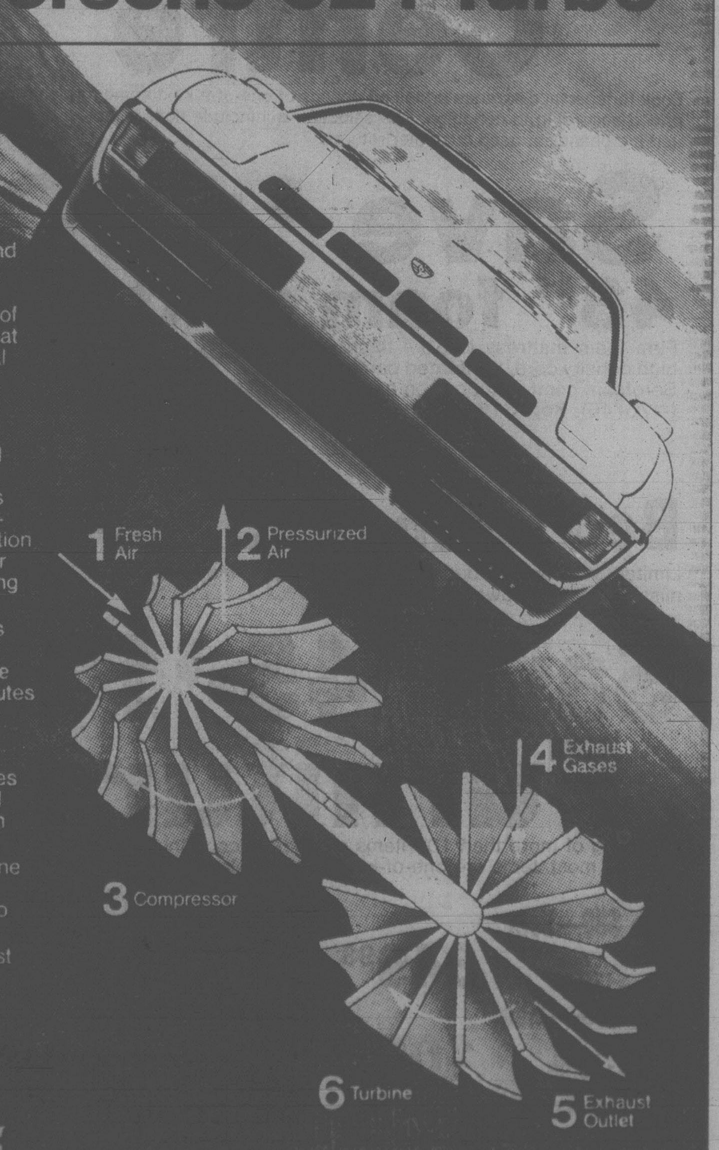
Porsche 924 Turbo



On the track at Weissach it covers the ¼ mile from a standing start in 16.3 secs. and reaches 142 km/h. Maximum speed: 212 km/h. The 924 Turbo is a direct descendant of the 917 Can-Am champion that made turbocharging practical for road racers.
1. The turbocharger draws in fresh air.
2. Compressor forces air/fuel mixture into cylinders under pressure. Because it receives more air/fuel than a naturally-aspirated engine, its combustion is greater. And its horsepower is increased without increasing its engine displacement.
3. It has almost instantaneous throttle response because of its bypass valve. When throttle is closed, valve opens and routes pressurized air harmlessly back through compressor in a closed loop to maintain turbine speed. So turbine does not have to be re-accelerated and boost is available again in only 0.1 second.
4. Hot, normally-wasted, engine exhaust gases drive turbine which is directly connected to compressor.
5. Gases vent through exhaust line and muffler. A wastegate is upstream of the turbine to control excess gases not required to power turbine.
At Porsche, each car is designed as a total system. And so the 924 Turbo has a new cylinder head. A stronger driveshaft. New spoilers: front and rear. And the lowest drag coefficient of any street Porsche: 0.35.

Thomson still seeks expansion in U.S.

TORONTO (CP) — Thomson Newspapers Ltd. of Toronto continues to ride the acquisition trail and hopes to lasso more newspapers in the United States this year, Ken Thomson, chairman and chief executive officer, said Thursday.

Thomson told the annual meeting the company is looking constantly for opportunities to buy U.S. papers and "I am confident that some of these will materialize this year."

Thomson Newspapers now owns 67 daily newspapers in the U.S. along with 37 in Canada, in addition to a number of weekly papers in both countries.

The Thomson family, through its holding company, The Woodbridge Co. Ltd., controls 71 per cent of Thomson Newspapers and also holds 73 per cent of Hudson's Bay Co. Ltd., the giant Winnipeg-based retailer.

In an interview, Thomson said the recent acquisition of 100 per cent of FP Publications Ltd. of Toronto does not mean the end of expansion possibilities for Thomson Newspapers in Canada.

"I would hope we might do something more in Canada because I like to have opportunities to buy Canadian," he said. "But the possibilities are greater in the U.S."

Thomson said the company has not had time to consider the future of the eight newspapers in the FP group with the exception of The Globe and Mail in Toronto, which will continue to be expanded nationally.

Some of the FP newspapers are in financial difficulty, particularly the Ottawa Journal.

Of that newspaper, Thomson said, "I would hope and think that somehow it will survive."

Savings bond cash-in slowing

OTTAWA (CP) — Investors cashed in only $93 million worth of Canada Savings Bonds in the week ended Wednesday, ending a major run on the bonds caused by high interest rates paid on alternative investments.

The weekly cash-in of bonds is back to more normal levels compared with levels of between $150 million and $300 million in the last two months as investors turned to other investments paying well in excess of the 12-per-cent rate on the bonds.

In the year begining in April, more than $1 billion in bonds have been cashed in compared with $1.1 billion in all of 1979.

To compensate for the run on the bonds, the government has raised more funds from the sale of treasury bills and marketable bonds to pay for operations this year.

Bank rate, prime gap wider

OTTAWA (CP) — The Bank of Canada's trend-setting bank rate hit its lowest level in almost a year Thursday, dropping 1.51 percentage points from 13.34 to 11.83 per cent.

The sixth consecutive weekly decline in the floating rate had been expected after the Canadian dollar rallied more than one cent this week — to 86.15 cents U.S. by Thursday — following the federalist triumph in the Quebec referendum on sovereignty-association Tuesday.

However, despite the large drop in the bank rate, the chartered banks followed with only a one-point cut in their prime rates to 13.75 per cent, effective Monday.

That widens the gap between the bank rate and the primes to 1.92 percentage points, compared to the usual spread of between three-quarters of one per cent and one per cent.

Federal officials speculated the chartered banks allowed the gap to widen because they are still forced to pay higher interest on savings accounts, at least until the end of this month.

The Royal Bank of Canada, the Bank of Nova Scotia, the Bank of Montreal, the Toronto Dominion Bank, the Mercantile Bank of Canada and the National Bank all announced they were cutting their prime lending rates.

The Bank of Montreal and Bank of Nova Scotia also lowered interest rates on mortgages.

The Bank of Montreal said one-year closed interest rates are down, effective today, to 13 per cent from 13.75 per cent and one-year open rates to 13.5 per cent from 14.25 per cent. Two- and three-year closed rates have fallen to 13.425 per cent from 13.75 per cent while five-year closed rates have declined to 13.5 per cent from 13.75 per cent.

The Bank of Nova Scotia said its rates for residential mortgages with terms of one, three and five years has been cut to 13 per cent from 13.75 per cent, effective immediately.

Prime lending rates, charged to the banks' most credit-worthy customers, now are at their lowest since last October while the bank rate has not been this low since July, 1979.

Securities facing fine

TORONTO (CP) — Dominion Securities Ltd. has been fined $1,500 by the Toronto Stock Exchange for what the exchange says was a misleading newspaper advertisement.

The advertisment, which appeared in The Globe and Mail Jan. 18, said the Dominion Securities stock selection system "virtually assures investors they will buy low and sell high."

2-point-drop in prime rate at Citibank

NEW YORK (UPI) — Citibank, the United States' second largest bank, lowered its prime lending rate by 2 points to 14½ percent Friday in the wake of the Federal Reserve's decision to ease credit.

Manufacturers Hanover was the only big bank to immediately follow Citibank's lead to 14½ percent, but there was a rash of prime cuts to 15 percent and 15½ percent and analysts predict the 14½ percent prime will soon be leapfrogged downhill.

The cuts in the benchmark rate for business loans followed an announcement by the Federel Reserve Board late Thursday that it is substantially loosening the credit curbs it imposed March 14 in its effort to fight inflation.

The Fed cut to 7½ percent from 15 percent the bank reserve requirement it imposed on consumer borrowing and to 5 percent from 10 percent the marginal reserve requirements and special deposit requirements it imposed on banks.

Analysts predicted the prime rate would drop to as low as 11 percent within weeks, and, indeed, banks have been slow to pass along their lower costs to customers as they attempt to recoup profit losses they suffered when the Fed put the squeeze on their lending.

Meanwhile, the U.S. government reported that the scorching inflation rate slowed considerably in April with consumer prices rising 0.9 percent as energy costs stabilized and prices for food, clothing and housing grew more moderately.

The April increase in the Consumer Price Index — a barometer of the cost of living in the United States — was the smallest in 15 months and followed three straight monthly hikes of 1.4 percent.

The rate of inflation, compounded on an annual basis, stood at 11.4 percent in April. That is well below the steady 18.1 percent inflation rate during January, February and March.

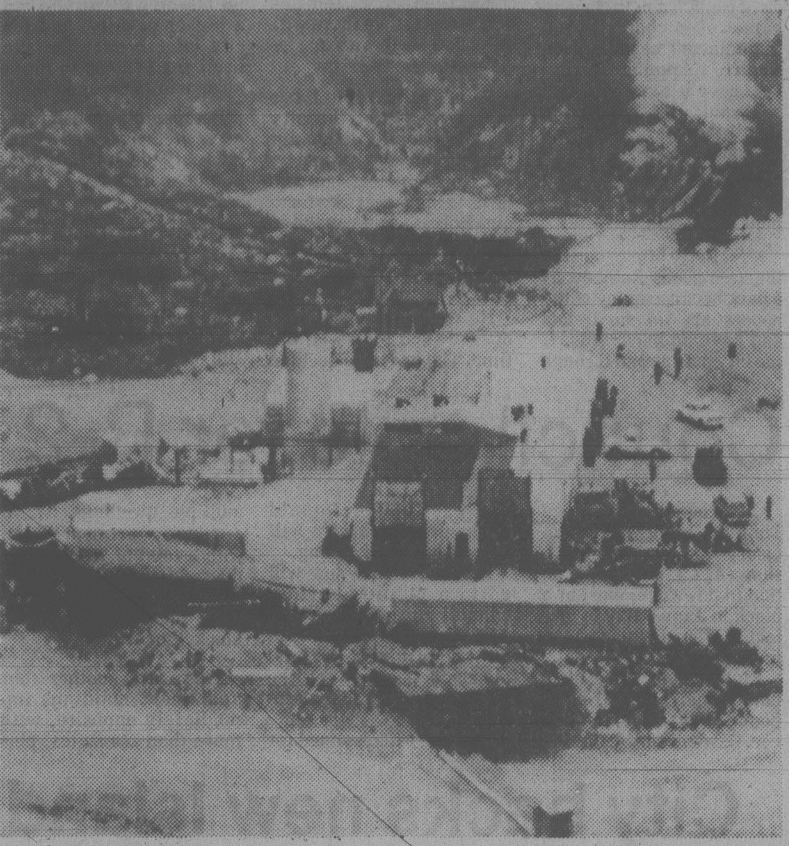
The inflation report was an encouraging sign for President Carter, who has promised that rising prices will abate in early summer. Government economists predicted recently the inflation rate will drop to 10 percent by year's end.

The administration's chief inflation fighter, Alfred Kahn, was encouraged but cautious.

He told Congress' Joint Economic Committee today, "While I'm relieved that we're moving out of double-digit rates — showing that we've stopped or even reversed the almost hysterical fear of inflation — the underlying (inflation) is still there."

But even though inflation eased in April, the real spendable income of a typical American could not keep pace with the cost of living. The Labor Department said spendable income plunged 1.2 percent last month.

Hunt for lost miners now frantic



Aerial view shows mine buildings with cave-in in background

VAL D'OR, Que. (UPC) — Rescuers intensified their frantic efforts today to free eight miners sealed in a gold mine that collapsed almost three days ago under a sea of mud and slime, while hopes the men would be found alive shrank with each passing hour.

At daybreak, a team of about 40 rescuers armed with scoop trucks, high-powered torches, pneumatic drills and hand tools began inching their way through tons of mud along the main production ramp of the mine 550 kilometers (330 miles) north of Montreal.

Others clambered down a ventilation shaft to try to reach five men who were believed scattered in four different locations when the year-old mine collapsed late Tuesday night.

"We're making good progress," said Donald Lavigne, general manager of Belmoral Mines Ltd. "We've got the bulkheads in place to 200 feet so it should be safe for us to proceed from the 100-foot level to 200 feet."

Meanwhile, Red Cross personnel and officials of the private Quebec Mining Association waited anxiously above ground for the yawning, 200-foot wide crater created by the cave-in to dry, which would minimize the danger of further mudslides. Crews used pumps lowered from helicopters to syphon tons of water from the gaping crater.

The rescuers, part of a team of 81 miners and engineers who have worked non-stop to free their mates from the 500-foot deep mine, were trying to locate a tiny manhole leading to a narrow gallery 150 feet undergound, where they believed two of the trapped miners might be found.

But little hope was held out for the two — Guy Daigle, 28, and Gilles Legare, 32. The men may have been buried alive in the fierce surge of mud that shot inexplicably through the 55 feet of sheer granite shielding the mine, Lavigne said.

He said if rescuers could locate the manhole, there was a "slim chance" of saving them.

"When you get clay and water through a two-inch hole, it's fierce. And that mixture is worse than any grease compound you can imagine."

A third crew was on hand to begin drilling through a sheet of solid granite to free five men, presumed trapped in or below an elevator ventilator shaft left unfinished before the disaster.

However, the five may run out of oxygen, Lavigne said, because 27 feet of the shaft above them had yet to be drilled out.

"If they didn't move we are confident that we can get them out very shortly, but if they did move, they haven't a hope in hell because they would have got buried in the slime."

Rescuers hoped a third miner, Marc Godbout, would be found sheltered safely in a pump station or lunch room hollowed out of the granite 200 feet down the main ramp that snakes its way another 300 feet to the floor of the mine.

Sixteen men managed to escape the collapse by clambering through a portion of the ventilator that led to the surface.

The mine, the first of three owned by Belmoral in the region to go into production, is one of several opened since the rising price of the precious metal created a gold rush in this community two years ago.

One man was killed in a previous accident at the mine.

Where's red tide's next strike?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federal fisheries officials said Thursday they do not know if the deadly red tide plankton infecting shellfish, which has killed one man, will spread along B.C.'s coast this summer.

"It's highly erratic, we don't know what it will do," fisheries inspector Charles Campbell said in an interview. "So far it appears to be localized."

Fisheries officials are monitoring coastal areas closely, he said. The latest red tide outbreak has forced closure of shellfish beaches from south of Campbell River, about 220 kilometres north of Victoria, to the northern tip of Vancouver Island, he said.

The plankton, affected by an organism called Gonyaulux, is dangerous to humans, who can suffer paralysis after eating infected shellfish, he said.

Symptoms of poisoning include numbness or tingling of the lips and tongue, spreading to fingers and toes. Death is caused by respiratory paralysis.

Ernest Daniel Fred, 33, of Health Bay, died earlier this week from eating contaminated butter clams.

Campbell warned that while the red color is an indicator of red tide infection, areas can be contaminated and lack the characteristic red hue.

Rainbow-site battle lost in 5-3 vote

By NORMAN GIDNEY

They aren't singing Over the Rainbow in Victoria West today. Skies are grey for residents who fought to keep the three-acre Rainbow sea cadet site for a waterfont park.

Not even the last-ditch appeals of some of the kids who play down there swayed aldermen from their determination to put houses on the property.

City council voted 5-3 Thursday night to rezone half for a 21-unit townhouse development.

(Council has already received several offers for the property, ranging as high as $600,000.)

A large part of the rest is to be a paved scenic drive and the remaining narrow strip of waterfront and the small offshore islands are to be kept in their natural state as public green space.

Thirteen-year-old Holly Murrison of 614 Seaforth gave council a petition with names of 35 children from the adjacent neighborhood south of Esquimalt Road.

"Leave it the way it is," she said. "It's more fun than other parks. We can make up our own games."

"We really like it as it is," said young Terry Gibbons of 310 Robert.

Mrs. Betty Murrison said the area needs Rainbow as a park because many of the houses are on small lots and have no backyards. If the city puts a road through connecting Russel and Robert streets, then there will be chaos in the area, she claimed.

Some aldermen have maintained that the city has always intended to put housing on the property, but Norman Pearson, who owns a house at Seaforth and Robert, said council in 1973 asked the provincial government to use greenbelt funds to save the site.

He was deputy minister of lands and forests at the time. The province decided the downtown Reid site had a higher priority, and the city later bought the site itself for $320,000 to block an apartment project.

Pearson claimed the request demonstrated council's early desire that Rainbow be made a park.

Only aldermen Gretchen Brewin, John Cooper and Robin Blencoe voted against the rezoning proposal.

Council's main proponent of the scheme, Ald. Bill McElroy, said Victoria can't afford to keep the property as park. It would cost $400,000 and the city needs that money to buy property elsewhere for a housing land bank.

Cooper urged council to keep this last open piece of waterfront from the Johnson Street bridge to the Esquimalt border. He said that the Advisory Planning Commission had voted against the rezoning plan.

"We are going to save the beach — that is not the issue here," said Ald. Bob Wright.

Royal Olympic plan proceeds

A proposed five-storey addition to the Royal Olympic Hotel, 642 Johnson, received approval from city council Thursday night.

By a slim 5-4 vote with Mayor Bill Tindall breaking the tie, council sent to public hearing an application by hotel owner W.G. Wellburn to bend downtown zoning requirements to eliminate the need for parking.

Under existing zoning the 55-room addition at the corner of Broad and Johnson would require 28 parking slots, but the site is rocky and a garage can't be built underground.

The Advisory Planning Commission recommended that this stipulation be relaxed, and also that the existing 3:1 density limit be waived. The addition would have a density of 5.23:1, meaning floor space would be more than five times the lot area.

Both Ald. Bob Wright and Ald. Robin Blencoe opposed giving the Royal Olympic a special break.

"It's a precedent that could give us trouble down the road," said Wright.

Council opts for R-2 duplex

City council went along Thursday night with an Advisory Planning Commission (APC) recommendation to downzone most of a block in James Bay to protect it from further apartment development.

Eight out of 10 resident homeowners on the block bounded by Rendal, Simcoe, Oswego and St. James, just east of MacDonald Park, petitioned city hall for single-family zoning.

In a move that now will go to a public hearing, council agreed with the APC recommendation to downzone nine city lots, about 50 per cent of the block, to R-2 duplex zoning.

Now the area is zoned for multiple dwellings. There are three apartment blocks with a total of 75 suites on the small block and a developer is consolidating land for a fourth in the 317-323 block Simcoe.

There are another four apartment buildings immediately opposite, with more than 250 suites, plus the James Bay Lodge extended care home.

Robert Hornsby of the James Bay Downzoning Committee said in a letter to council that the remaining homeowners hold the position that the houses on this block represent an important oasis in a sea of apartment blocks.

City backs new Island flights

City council agreed Thursday night to consider an endorsement of a new commuter airline's proposal for Victoria-Vancouver airport-to-airport service.

Ald. Bob Wright questioned the financial basis for Coastal Commuter Air Ltd.'s bid to compete with West Coast Air.

Wright told Coastal Commuter president Erik Andersen, a former senior executive at Pacific Western Airlines, that the small airlines recently bought up by the Jim Pattison group and merged into West Coast were running in the red.

It would be difficult for a new entrant into the field to compete, he suggested.

Using a wheeled Twin Otter, Coastal Commuter would fly seven times a day between Vancouver and Victoria airports.

Union dials P for pressure

By MIKE HUGHES

You've heard about Work to Rule. Now, how about Work to Please.

That would appear to be the strategy of B.C. Telephone Co. employees in their lengthy struggle for a new contract.

The Telecommunications Workers Union (TWU) is providing buttons for its 10,000 members which read: "We give super service."

The idea, as explained by a union member to this week's Victoria Labor Council meeting, is to give the customer the most courteous, efficient service possible — all in the public interest.

The B.C. Tel employees' contract expired Dec. 31, 1979 and John Hoffmeister, a TWU delegate to the labor council, said the bargaining situation is "pretty muddy."

But the union has taken the position that its members suffered enough in the three-month '77-'78 strike and there is no way they are walking off the job this time around.

"The only way we would be off the job is if the employer locked us out," he told council delegates.

The super-service button is the union's first pick from a bag of possible pressure tactics.

Hoffmeister said the buttons came out about three weeks ago and the company apparently countered with an employee booklet entitled Questions and Answers.

He said the intention of the booklet appears bent on painting as bleak a financial picture as possible.

However, B.C. Tel spokesman Keith Matthews said the booklet had nothing whatsoever to do with the negotiations.

He said it was put out in connection with the company's application in March for a rate increase.

Hoffmeister said locally the B.C. Tel labor-management situation isn't too bad but elsewhere in the province there is a "horrendous" number of outstanding grievances and arbitrations.

Meanwhile, federal conciliation commissioner Ed Peck is meeting with the parties separately in an effort to reach a contract settlement.

Trees to live for a while

For the time being at least, the ancient trees in North Saanich's P.O. Bull Memorial Park have won a reprieve.

North Saanich Mayor Eric Sherwood Thursday ordered a halt to a proposed road construction through the two-acre park that would linkup Wain Road just south of Deep Cove.

The extension was proposed to reduce traffic on Birch Road where a mother and her infant son were struck by a truck and killed last October.

The proposal, however, has been opposed by several residents including former North Saanich mayor Paul Grieve and Ruth Bull, widow of Col. R.O. Bull after whom the park is named.

They felt the road extension would be detrimental to the park which the Victoria Horticultural Society describes as an outstanding example of forests that once existed on Saanich Peninsula.

Sherwood said he wanted to review the costs and implications of the new road.

Two rescued after sinking

Two Nanaimo fishermen were rescued unharmed early today after their fishboat sank off Cape Scott.

They were identified as Lon Tarkanen and Boyd Jackson.

A B.C. Telephone marine operator at Campbell River phoned the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre at CFB Esquimalt at 12:12 a.m. to report their boat — the Connie Marie — was going down.

The Canadian Coast Guard cutter Racer, the destroyer-escort HMCS Restigouche, the Canadian Coast Guard lifeboat from Bull Harbor and a Buffalo aircraft from CFB Comox were sent to the scene.

The lifeboat picked up the men from a liferaft.

The men were transported to Port Hardy.

Nostalic moments with Rudy Valee

By AUDREY JOHNSON

The house was far from full and the applause only mildly enthusiastic in response to Thursday's visit of Rudy Vallee, crooner idol of the 1930s.

He was brought to the McPherson Playhouse (an idea that was originally to have been sponsored by the Victoria Real Estate Board) to provide a benefit performance for the Lord Chamberlain's Players' Globe Theatre project

Best remembered by those who were growing up in the '30s for his collegiate image and the megaphone that amplified his rather small and nasal but musical voice, Vallee loves to re-create his past.

And that was the substance of Thursday's two-hour entertainment.

Using a cassette player, a big screen and projector, the only lighting, subdued color spots, husky-voiced Vallee told the audience about his career, now 35 years behind him.

Cassettes, powerfully amplified, poured out the songs that were familiar four decades ago — Betty Co-Ed, Kitty from Kansas City, You Are the Only Girl in the World, Honey, The Stein Song.

Sometimes there was a fumble; the wrong cassette came on following a spoken introduction. Tag lines and jokes were not very funny to an audience seasoned in TV sit-coms.

But Vallee seemed unruffled by any small accident or audience lack of response. In fact, his showman's poise surfaced when some loudly spoken but indistinguishable comment from a male member of the audience interrupted his flow of reminiscence.

Without breaking stride he fired: "If you don't mind, sir, one fool at a time."

The performance generally was overly narcissistic and became tedious with its sheet music cover reproductions projected in large format. But there were nostalgic moments that had a moving quality and one of these was the sequence based on the Rogers and Hart song about the train caller in Grand Central Station, All Points West.

It provided the evening's principal drama with excellent slides of trains and people, railway depots and cities, reviving memories of how people travelled before they took to the air.

Still, one is left with the realization that Vallee was not a good choice to do a solo benefit performance for the Globe project. He said it himself when he commented rather acidly on the number of television specials other pop singers had had, adding: "No one has ever asked me to do one."

Tonight and Saturday, the project's artistic director, prominent Canadian star of TV, film and stage Barry Morse, will give his own one-man benefit performance at the McPherson.

The result and the impact will undoubtedly be very different.

Hearing on marina set

A public hearing will be held May 28 on Oak Bay developer Robert Wright's proposal to develop 25 acres at Tsehum Harbor in North Saanich.

The hearing, scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. at the Royal Canadian Legion Hall, will deal with an application for a development permit.

Wright's proposal to build houses on the property has generated considerable controversy among North Saanich residents.

Last year the provincial government allowed the 25 acres to be removed from the Agricultural Land Reserve despite opposition by North Saanich council.

Planners chide trustees

School board trustees finally met with Capital Regional District directors to discuss mutual planning concerns this week and were asked where they've been in the past.

Trustee Martin Levin, chairman of School District 61 planning committee, District 61 Trustee Terry Hackett and District 63 Trustee Gerry Kristianson were chided by Victoria Ald. Bob Wright and Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier for the failure by school boards in the past to respond to planning meeting invitations.

"In the past our planning department has got hold of your school board and still nobody showed up," Wright told Levin.

Recently school boards have expressed concern about local planning decisions being made without consideration of school development and enrolment.

In some residential areas enrolments are declining while in others, schools are hard-pressed to accommodate children from burgeoning subdivisions.

Wright was pleased to see educational planners represented, and Couvelier added that Saanich — which also had invited trustees to its planning sessions — is eager to have representation.

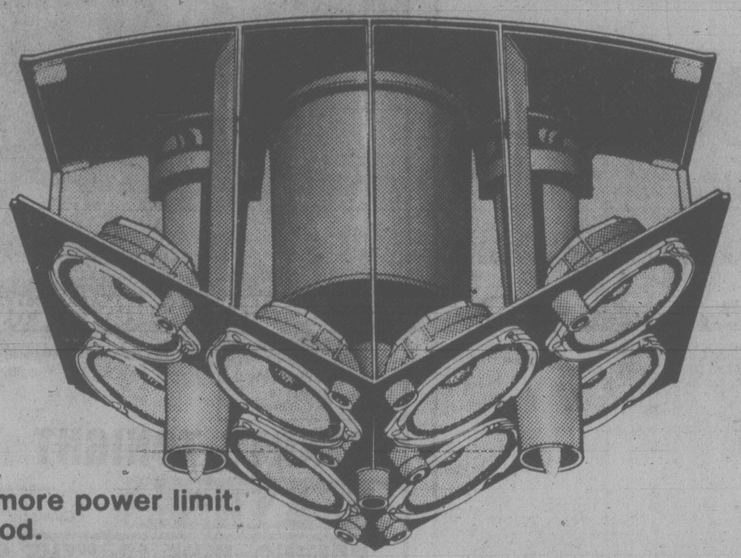
BOSE® WEEKEND

If you've never heard BOSE® speakers come down and let us show you!

Introducing the BOSE Bose 901 Series IV Direct/Reflecting speaker.



No more power limit. Period.

The new Bose 901® Series IV loudspeaker has a new, all-aluminum helical-wound voice coil that virtually eliminates the heat build-up problems normally associated with driver failure. So Bose has removed all power irritations for home use. Yet can still drive the speakers with as little as ten watts per channel. Also, there are new equalizer controls that let you compensate for variations in room acoustics and speaker placements. The Bose 901® IV speakers give you life-like, spacious sound unmatched by any other speaker.

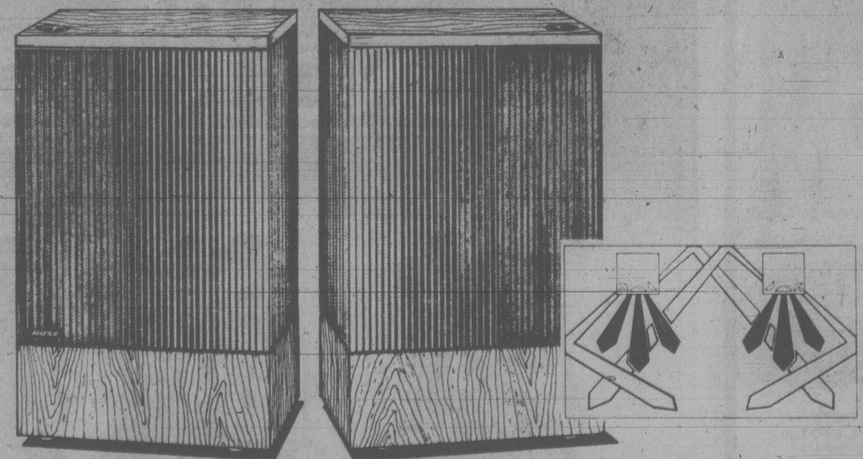
Introducing the BOSE® Model 501 Speaker



It sounds as good in the living room as it does in the demo room. Some speakers that sound great in the demo room just don't make it once you get them home. Not so with the Bose Model 501. The new Model 501 is the latest Direct/Reflecting® speaker design from Bose. Because of its asymmetrical design, sound is reflected to every corner of the room giving an extraordinarily open spacious sound and eliminating "dead spots" common with conventional speakers. Plus the new Bose Model 501 has a unique Direct Energy Control that lets you adjust the speaker to the music and the room. A 10-inch woofer delivers super-deep bass and its two tweeters, one pointing forward and one back, provide smooth brilliant clear highs. In addition the new Bose 501 speakers fit your budget as well as your room.

Reg. $799. pr.

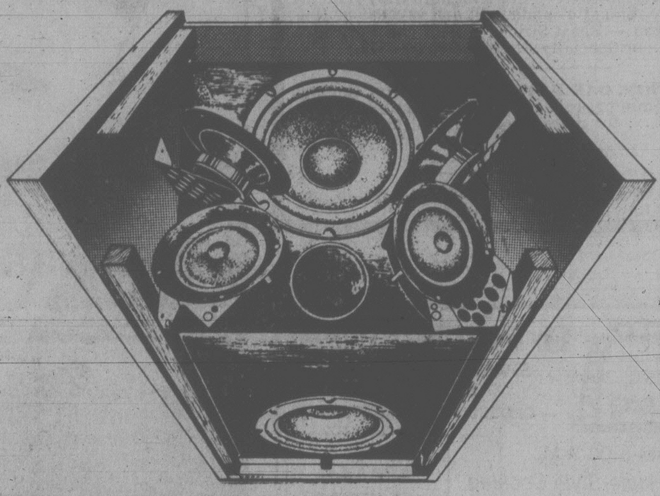
The BOSE® Representative, Mr. Jack Shepe, will be at Kelly's Victoria Friday and Saturday to demonstrate and answer any and all questions regarding these superlative speakers.

Introducing BOSE Model 601 Speaker



The new Model 601 loudspeaker from Bose looks, works and sounds very different from any conventional floor-standing speaker. Like the world-renowned Bose 901® Series III, the Model 601 is a Direct/Reflecting® speaker, designed to recreate the impact and presence of a live performance with a quality of realism that no conventional speaker can match. The Model 601's unique configuration of six drivers — four tweeters and two woofers — spreads a balance of reflected and direct sound to every corner of the room. From virtually any listening position, the sound is open and spacious, full of the feel and ambience of a live performance, and with none of the harshness so characteristic of conventional high-fidelity speakers. The Model 601 is also highly efficient (minimizing amplifier power and expense) and exceptionally versatile (allowing superior performance in a wide range of speaker positions). For a more complete introduction to the Model 601 come in for a live demonstration.

Reg. $1049 pr.

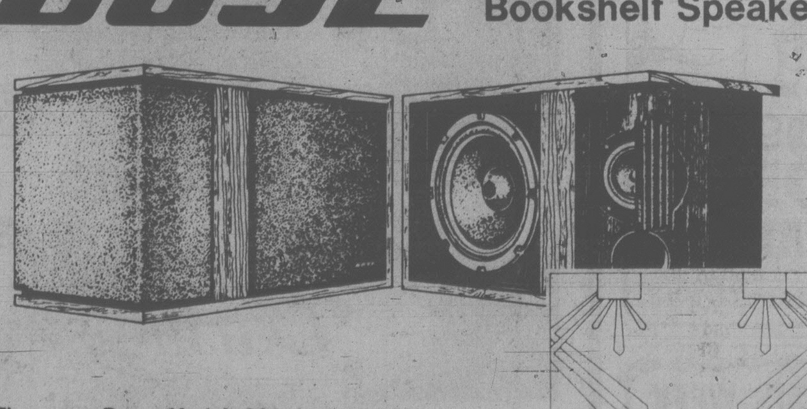
Introducing the BOSE Model 301 Bookshelf Speakers



The new Bose Model 301 incorporates a number of exclusive features which put its level of performance way above any bookshelf speaker made. Exclusive Direct/Reflecting® speaker design utilizes a proper balance of reflected and direct sound to give you the spatial realism of a live performance. Exclusive Direct Energy Control lets you shape the sound to fit the acoustics of your listening room. Exclusive tweeter-protection circuit lets you drive the Model 301 really hard. Compare features. Compare performance. Then compare price. You won't find the open, spacious sound of the Model 301 in any other bookshelf speaker. Come in today for your demonstration.

Cary Grant warns career women

TORONTO (CP) — At 7 he's handsome, charmin and witty as ever but Car Grant, the star of 72 films has some bad news for th determined caree woman.

"The woman who is i tent only upon a caree isn't that attractive. It's very tough vocation wome have chosen for themselves."

Despite his lack of enthusiasm about workin women, a feeling he admit may be the consequence o having had three actres wives (Virginia Cheril Betsy Drake and Dya Cannon), he retains a gra cious attitude toward women.

Grant said he enjoyed working with almost all th actresses with whom h came in contact during hi long career, preferring no to single out one for mention.

And the actor, who ha been married four times, i not averse to the thought o another marriage either.

"I haven't been ver good at it, as you hav probably noted. But I certainly don't rule it out in th future."

Weissmuller now 'just waiting to die'

ACAPULCO, Mexico (AP) — Johnny Weissmuller, the athlete cum actor who won every race he ever swam, including those that won him five Olympic gold medals, now sits on a terrace overlooking the Pacific waiting to die.

"He just tells me, 'leave me alone, all I want to do is die,' " said Maria Weissmuller, his sixth wife.

Weissmuller, 75, who is best remembered for his movie roles as Tarzan, has been in Acapulco since late 1979, and has been in failing health since 1977 when he suffered a number of strokes. His wife said he is not lucid all the time and speaks very little.

Because of a tracheotomy made after doctors discovered a growth in his throat and an incision in his stomach which allows feeding, the retired actor is deprived of one of the things he loves most in life — swimming.

"The last time he swam on his own was in December, out in the pool here," said Mrs. Weissmuller. "Now he mostly just looks out into the ocean. He doesn't talk much because of the tube in his throat. But he can say: 'Go to hell! ' when he gets mad, and he understands everything I say."

"There are nurses tending Johnny around the clock, but you know, he is miserable sometimes because of those tubes in his stomach and throat," Mrs. Weissmuller said. "He is very mad about those things because they keep him from swimming."

The couple married in 1963 and they lived for many years in Las Vegas. In 1977, during a trip to Los Angeles, Weissmuller suffered a cerebral stroke and was admitted to hospital. He stayed for a while in the Motion Picture and Televison Country Hospital, which is still paying his medical expenses.

In May, 1979, the hospital director said Weismuller made Tarzan calls in the middle of the night, frightening other patients and hospital workers. Mrs. Weissmuller moved him from the San Fernando Valley facility to this resort city because of his behavior.

PAYOFF PUZZLE

THIS WEEK'S PRIZE IS $750.00

PREVUE PAYOFF PUZZLE is the intriguing word puzzle game the whole family will enjoy and have an opportunity to win a big cash award every week!
THIS CROSSWORD is not a draw. It tests your knowledge of words and pays off for EVERY correct solution. All you have to do is complete each of the words in a criss-cross format. Clues are provided . . . even a work list which has all the correct answers, plus some you'll have to eliminate. But there are no trick words or guessing . . . careful thought will make you a winner! So start and play today!

PLEASE NOTE: EACH ENTRY MUST BE IN A SEPARATE ENVELOPE

CONTEST RULES

1. Solve the Prevue Payoff Puzzle by filling in the missing letters to make the words that you think best fit the clues. To do this read each clue carefully.

2. Check the word list. It has all the correct answers plus some you will have to eliminate.

3. You need not be a subscriber to this newspaper in order to enter. You may submit as many entries as you wish on the entry blank printed in this newspaper or exact-sized, clear, hand-drawn facsimiles of the printed entry blank. NO MECHANICALLY PRODUCED, PRINTED, MIMEOGRAPHED, etc. copies of the entry blank will be accepted. Each entry must contain the contestant's name, address and phone number or it will not be accepted.

4. Anyone is eligible to enter this contest except employees (and members of their families) of Victoria Press Ltd.

5. All entries MUST be mailed and bear a postmark. The paper is not responsible for entries lost or delayed in the mail. Entries for each week's contest not received for judging by 12 noon the following Wednesday are not eligible.

6. To qualify you must write your answer to one of the clues on the outside of the envelope. See coupon for instructions.

7. Prevue will award the current prize to the contestant who sends in an all correct solution. If more than one all correct solution is received the prize money will be shared equally. If no all correct solution is received, $50 will be added to the following week's prize.

8. There is only one correct solution to each puzzle and only the correct answer can win. The decision of the judges is final and all contestants agree to abide by the judges' decision. All entries become the property of Prevue. Only one prize will be awarded to a family unit.

9. Everyone has the same opportunity to win for EVERY QUALIFIED ENTRY WILL BE CHECKED and the winner announced. No claiming is necessary.

10. Entries must be mailed to Prevue Payoff Puzzle, Victoria Press Ltd., Box 300, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2N4. One entry per envelope.

11. Prevue reserves the right to correct any typographical errors which may appear during the puzzle game.

12. Puzzle clues may be abbreviated and such words as AN, THE and A omitted.

CLUES ACROSS

2. PLAY not plan. It's more directly a question of doing too much, rather than of planning to do so.
6. BOXING not boring. "Not everybody" is interested in BOXING. Nobody reads a boring correspondent as such.
8. DODGES not dodger. The clue's air of approval can more reasonably be applied to DODGES. A dodger is sly, shifty, lazy, etc., rather than "rather clever."
10. TEST not tent. "Though simple" (i.e., despite being less thorough and technically elaborate as some), a TEST may be reliable. Why should one have any such doubt about a simple tent?
11. CUPS not pups. The idea of casually "giving them away" suits CUPS better; it would be more a question of finding suitable homes for the pups.
13. BOSS not loss. As the clue implies, more or less blame attaches to a bad BOSS. There is no particular reason to view a loss as culpable (that it "may be quite unforgivable"); alternatively, if business conditions are good, even a moderate loss may be very blameworthy — so why specify a bad one?
15. PORK not port. The clue's very practical attitude suits PORK more aptly than port, a luxury drink.
16. WAYS not wars. "Wars" is unsuitably specific, since the interest of a historian would be more general. Also, wars in which the Romans were involved (e.g., with the Carthaginians) were not strictly the wars of the Romans.
24. CONFUSION not contusion. One relates contusion to actual blows struck, rather than to the broad fact of fighting having broken out.

CLUES DOWN

1. BAD not mad. Medically, the point rests in the gravity of the attack, rather than the insanity of an attack.
4. LOVE not lose. "LOVE" contributes more suitable emphasis to the clue. "Lose" tends merely to repeat the sense of "be deprived of."
5. DIET not dirt. Certainly, a lot of people are interested in DIET. Arguably, scandal, etc., that is published in not "dirt" by common consent.
7. GRAPES not grades. The alternative word, grades, is quite vague while GRAPES is specific.
9. DEPARTMENT not deportment. Being perhaps not himself entirely responsible for the excellence of his DEPARTMENT, a man may possibly have to "see it" deteriorate as the clue suggests. More directly, a man proud of his deportment will not let it deteriorate.
12. HOME not hope. Since it's said that hope "springs eternal" anyway, a HOME is more practically the thing to view as something needed, that you wish people could get.
14. WAGES not wares. In the appropriate cases, fine craftsmanship ensures good wares, and "should" result in good WAGES (but too often doesn't).
20. TANK not talk or task. Aptly, a TANK may be a container for water or gas, etc., or it can be of the other kind — "a military one, maybe." It is less natural to think of a talk, or a task, as being of either a military or non-military nature.

All That Jazz and Japanese film big winners at Cannes

CANNES, France (AP) — All That Jazz, a film by American director Bob Fosse, and Japanese director Akira Kurosawa's Kagemusha won top honors today at the 1980 Cannes Film Festival.

The Cannes jury, headed this year by actor Kirk Douglas, choose the two films from more than a score of other entries to receive the festival's Golden Palm awards.

Both films were popular favorites among the critics and film industry executives who gather annually at the French resort for the two week festival.

All That Jazz, an autobiographical look at Fosse's career intertwined with a backstage look at the production of a Broadway musical, got rave reviews when it was shown here during the festival.

It was the second year in a row that an American film was among the top winners at Cannes. Francis Ford Coppola's Apocolypse Now Was chosen the festival's outstanding film last year.

Controversial centre gets go-ahead in 5-3 council vote and the Advisory Design Panel have gone over the amendments.

Every alderman and the mayor — except Bob Wright — spoke at length on the convention centre, which has created wide divisions between aldermen and pitted Victoria residents against the downtown businessmen pushing for the project.

Ald. Frank Carson, considered the key vote and reported to be undecided as late as a day ago, voted with aldermen Bill McElroy, Ron McKenzie, Ken Sinclair and the mayor to change the zoning.

Everyone agrees that Victoria needs a convention centre, Carson said, and it should go on the old Reid site at Fort and Wharf because the Old Town badly needs revitalization.

"Places of public assembly should go on the waterfront if it's available."

Carson criticized the Provincial Capital Commission and the Pan-Pacific group for ineptitude in handling the planning of the centre, and the mayor, one of two council representatives on the PCC, acknowledged the bungling.

"Hopefully, we're going to learn something from this experience," he said.

Ald. Cooper said council was dealing with the Reid site in isolation and called for an examination of possible future plans for the whole Inner Harbor. Several areas will be comin up for redevelopment in the near future, he added.

"I'm simply not satisfied with what we have in place."

Referring to the much-criticized nine-storey Bawlf building going up just north of the convention centre site — which the zoning allows — Cooper said: "We could have condominiums all along there.

"It's an interesting possibility."

Ald. Brewin wanted the Reid site kept open as a public park, with grass and trees.

Ald. McElroy said people have complained that their view of the Sooke hills will be blocked by the centre, but pointed out that anyone behind McQuade's or Hartwig Court can't see them now. They walk past and look around them.

TOWN TALK

Let us make clear that Times' reporter Brenda Dalglish, a sometimes contributor to Town Talk, didn't write this item.

In fact, she didn't even bother to mention that she's the first winner of the Jack Wasserman Memorial Award for outstanding reporting by a junior writer.

Brenda got the award, to be presented by the Vancouver Press Club, by sniffing out the first story which triggered the Dirty Tricks affair.

Ms. Dalglish, who was working at the time for the weekly Goldstream Gazette, covered a Social Credit constituency meeting where party workers bragged about nefarious letter-writing campaigns and other tricks.

The story took off from that point and the rest is history.

Brenda gets a trip to Vancouver and $300.

She also gets to buy the next time her fellow reporters spot her near a saloon.

Lorraine Cooper of the Visitors Information Centre is an example of the power of positive thinking.

She noted Ottawa is planning to issue a gardening stamp this month so she thought, what the heck, Victoria is the city of gardens so why not have the stamp issued in the B.C. capital instead of in Ottawa?

When the Postmaster General Andre Ouellet heard the idea he said, what the heck, why not? So he will be in town next Thursday to participate in a Causeway ceremony to put up the first hanging basket of the year and to present albums of the garden stamp to local mayors and other officials.

Philatelists are trying to get an invitation to the reception that will follow in the Crystal Garden. There will be 250 first-day covers of the new stamp handed out, one at a time, and Ouellet has promised to sign them.

That puts an instant value of about $100 on the souvenir. The 250 envelopes will be worth a total of $25,000.

Artistic director of the Lord Chamberlain's Players Society's Globe Theatre project, Barry Morse, has gained a vantage point from which he will be able to keep an eye on developments here.

He has been cast in a feature-length film to be made in Vancouver this summer. The name of the film is Interlock and the outfit that will make it, Interlock Productions Inc., is the first B.C. film production company to seek its financing through a public offering directed at Western Canadian investors.

The script is by two well-known Vancouver theatre men, Tom Braidwood and Stephen Miller. Morse will be playing his fifth role in a Canadian feature film, that of Professor Sam Higgins who becomes the murder victim of the story. Morse will be seen tonight and Saturday at McPherson Playhouse doing his one-man show entitled Merely Players.

Royal Jubilee Hospital head nurse Cathryn Cottyn, hailed as a heroine for her action in stopping on an Ontario highway last August to perform emergency first aid on 13 Chinese diplomats injured in an accident, will be awarded an Ontario Provincial Police citation right here at home.

Miss Cottyn will receive the Commissioner's Civilian Citation from Victoria chief Bill Snowden.

She applied artificial resuscitation, instructed bystanders on how to treat the other injured and told ambulance attendants who arrived later which patients should be first transported to hospital. Two patients died within three weeks of the accident.

"There is no doubt that without her help the incident would have turned out much worse than it eventually did," the police spokesman said.

Attorney-General Allan Williams is complaining about an organized letter-writing campaign protesting the Holiday Shopping Act.

The act passes the buck on Sunday shopping to the municipalities.

However, he is not suggesting there's any lettergateish hanky-panky involved.

Williams admits, with a grin: "All the signatures appear to be authentic."

The pumps which once were Pacific Pete property are now Petro-Canada's and there's a new logo coming for all the service stations.

The logo — a white maple leaf on a red background and the words Petro-Canada in black on the base — will eventually appear on all 420 stations from the Lakehead to Vancouver Island.

The white maple leaf, the blurb announcing the change said, thrusts like an "energy burst" into the field of red.

Not only the signs and pumps will change.

Every station will feature a complementary color scheme of bronze and earth tones to harmonize with any location from a shopping centre to a rural setting or residential suburb.

Yes, but will the gas be any cheaper?

One thing about the Stricklands — they stick to their jobs. Irving, for instance, was with the Times nearly 56 years before he retired as a photographer last year.

Now his younger brother, Lloyd, 64, is calling it quits after 41 years as a porter at the Empress Hotel.

Lloyd is one of two old-time Empress employees who are leaving the end of the month. Don McLean, 65, a pastry chef for the past 30 years, is the other.

The hotel held a reception for them this afternoon in the Duke of Kent Room.

Another retirement looms at the end of the month with the departure of Rudi Jahraus from Hastings Appliances.

Company owner Ed Hastings says he'll be throwing a party for him at the store at 2100 Douglas on May 30 and customers and staff past and present are invited to attend.

A spry 70, Jahraus has been in the appliance repair and refrigeration business in Victoria as long as anyone can remember. He's off to Golden to help his brother, who's also a refrigeration mechanic, and to work around the homestead.

Winds promise a swift Swiftsure

Largest fleet in history - 429 boats - sets sail Saturday in 50th renewal

By PAT DUFOUR

The largest Swiftsure fleet in history — 429 boats — stands ready for the start of the sailing classic Saturday morning.

And the weatherman promises to make the 50th anniversary of the race a sailor's delight.

Westerly winds of between 15 to 20 knots are expected at the start.

The wind, coupled with a favorable ebb tide, should have the massive fleet skudding toward Race Rocks and up the Strait of Juan de Fuca in record time.

A total of 267 boats will compete in the 136.2-mile race to the Swiftsure Bank and 162 smaller vessels will be in the 75.6-mile race to Clallam Bay, Wash., and back.

Echoes of the disastrous Fastnet race in 1979 can be found in the race instructions issued by the committee, headed by Frank Piddington and Sid Bryant.

They warn skippers all boats should be capable of fending for themselves in an emergency and outline the need for reliable safety harnesses and liferafts.

Many old veterans are back for the race, including Lol Killam's Graybeard of the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club.

She was first over the finish line in 1979. The 73-foot ketch swept the field in 1973 and 1974 as the over-all winner, first around the Swiftsure mark, first home and first in her division.

The 12-metre Weatherly, owned by Lynn Sommers and Alan Buchan of the Tacoma Yacht Club, is back. She sailed a dual race with Graybeard in 1979.

Winner of the America's Cup in 1962, she beat Graybeard around the Swiftsure mark by one minute.

Greg Oliver's The Distant Drummer of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club will also be trying to win the coveted Swiftsure trophy.

Oliver won his division in both 1974 and 1976 and lost the 1979 Swiftsure to Ken Pearce's The Pearce Arrow of the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club by a scant 3½ minutes.

The starting line will be in the vicinity of Brotchie Ledge off the Victoria coastline with the Canadian Navy's HMCS Porte de la Reine and HMCS Porte Quebec stationed at each end of the line.

The first boats get the start gun at 9:10 a.m. and if the wind holds, the first Swiftsure boats can be expected to finish off the Ogden Point breakwater early Sunday afternoon.

DID EMILY BATHE HERE? A bathtub uncovered by workmen raising the historic Emily Carr House on Government Street is investigated by Jim Kamp. The tub, along with a well and a rectangular tank, surfaced Thursday during a project to build concrete foundations as part of a refurbishing program for the 117-year-old home. Although the discovery posed something of a mystery to Bob Broadland, chief of administration and development in the heritage convervation branch of the provincial government, William and Rosalie Bowie, 924 Queens, knew all the time the well was there. The Bowies ran the Emily Carr Arts Centre from the home and found the well two years ago when they were replacing old boards at the back of the house.

Park land quality rapped

By BRENDA DALGLISH

The Juan de Fuca Parks and Recreation Commission doesn't like the quality of the park land it is being given by developers.

Some of the property made available to the commission is nothing more than rocks, swamps or land-locked parcels with no access, several members complained at a commission meeting Thursday.

Under provincial law, park land amounting to five per cent of a subdivision must be made available for public park use.

But for Langford, Colwood and Metchosin, unorganized areas, that creates problems.

The subdivision approving officer who is responsible for overseeing what property is made available in each subdivision, hasn't been providing the type of property the commission would like.

"Unfortunately the problem here is that what goes on down the road after the property has been turned over to the commission — the quality of life of the community — doesn't involve the approving officer from Highways," said recreation administrator Doug Ruttan.

In organized areas with municipal governments the approving officer is an employee of the municipality and is under its direction.

Ruttan said he knows of two incidents of park dedication in recent weeks when, in spite of protests, the approving officer approved subdivisions with park areas that weren't particularly desirable.

The commission currently holds 15 pieces of land ranging in size from one to three acres.

Langford regional director Ed Lubick said planners from the Capital Regional District have been considering establishing a policy guideline that the approving officer could follow on the question of when, what kind and how much park property should be requested.

Lubick said the policy will consider the question of whether cash settlements in lieu of park land dedication could be made by developers.

Tillicum backers rake CRD

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

The Capital Region District was attacked during a public meeting Thursday by supporters of Tillicum shopping centre.

Members of the public taking shots at the regional board included Metchosin and Colwood residents.

Robert Saunders of Colwood accused board directors of bumbling and fumbling and said the CRD should be investigated by the provincial government.

"Regional districts should be abolished. Maybe then we'll have some sanity," said Saunders, who told Saanich aldermen he ran unsuccessfully last year for Colwood CRD director.

Saunders said residents and business people in his area feel the same way he does.

Shirley Wilde, 3758 Duke, Metchosin, told the meeting the CRD exceeded its authority when it approved construction this summer of a shopping centre on Jacklin Road in Langford.

Population studies show the Western Community will not be able to support a shopping centre for many years, according to Wilde.

"Tillicum is first class and it's on time. Jacklin is premature," Wilde said.

The public information meeting was held at Saanich municipal hall to discuss the proposed $30 million Tillicum centre which will include Eatons, Zellers, Sears and Safeway.

Saanich and developers Cal Investments Ltd. are now embroiled in a legal battle initiated by the CRD over the proposed expansion of the centre from 295,000 square feet to 495,000 square feet.

The addition for an Eatons store was recently approved by Saanich aldermen who voted to lift a restrictive covenant limiting the size of the centre.

An injunction granted the CRD prevents Saanich from issuing building permits for the full-size centre.

Residents speaking in favor of the expansion said the giant-sized mall is conveniently located and will eliminate parking problems associated with downtown shopping.

Opponents objected to the concept of suburban shopping malls in general because they encourage car travel in a time of energy conservation and have a harmful effect on community life.

A report by municipal planner Gil Laurenson said the shopping centre, with its full range of stores and convenient parking, will have a major effect on exisiting commercial centres.

It will diminish whatever retail opportunities exist in Saanich's civic core.

A parking lot on the west side of the centre will have some impact on nearby Colquitz Creek Park, now being developed as one of the major parks in the region.

The expansion means the parking area will be closer to residential properties on the south side of the development than originally planned, the report states.

Laurenson also predicted the municipality can expect a series of commercial developments such as fast-food outlets on the east side of Tillicum Road.

Municipal engineer Cliff Warren studied an independent traffic report prepared for Cal Investments and came up with a list of road improvements.

According to Cal, 2,800 cars an hour will use the centre on weekdays. During Saturday afternoon peak periods 3,400 cars an hour will enter and leave the parking lot.

But increased traffic along Tillicum will be offset by the opening of the McKenzie Avenue extension, according to the staff report.

A report from the Saanich police department warned that vandalism and shoplifting will be major problems because the centre is close to George Pearkes arena and to Colquitz Junior Secondary School.

Police say they expect gatherings of young people after hours that will attract criminal activity such as soft-drug trafficking and liquor offences.

The department says without an increase in manpower, patrolling Tillicum will mean reduction of service in other areas of the municipality.

However, a police constable at the meeting Thursday said he would rather patrol a shopping centre than the Tillicum drive-in theatre, which formerly occupied the site.

Ald. Bob Cameron said: "It is ironic that just as America is about to stop building shopping centres we are just getting into high gear."

"Decentralization is another word for urban sprawl," said Cameron, adding that the development will contribute to the rot of the city centre.

Jewel thief suspect held

Oak Bay police are questioning a 25-year-old man in connection with a series of house break-ins in the Greater Victoria area in recent weeks in which silver and jewelry valued at more than $150,000 were taken.

Detective Darrell Jantzen said the suspect was picked up at a house in the 100-block Crease Thursday afternoon.

The man was preparing to drive away when officers arrived at 4:30 p.m., Jantzen said.

Police found a tape cassette which had been stolen from a house in the 100-block Beach last week and have charged the man with possession of stolen property.

Greater Victoria police have been frustrated in their attempts to capture a thief who has been breaking into scores of homes and carting off silver and jewelry in pillowslips.

Jantzen said a break in the case came as a result of a Times story last Saturday on the bandit's activities.

Gloves off in pediatric battle: Wallace

"Now the gloves are off — we're going to fight and fight hard."

That's the word from Dr. Scott Wallace following the Capital Regional District's hospital and health planning commission 17-1 vote to restrict pediatric and obstetric services to the new Helmcken Road Hospital.

Wallace said the regional board can expect a large delegation of people with strong feelings to show up at the next board meeting to express opposition to the decision.

He said Oak Bay, Saanich and Esquimalt councils have already stated their concern that obstetric and pediatric services will no longer be available at the Royal Jubilee Hospital once the new Helmcken Road facility begins operating.

Victoria council has yet to make a decision.

"How can we have any confidence in regional government when they ignore the concerns of their core components?" Wallace said.

He said he and others are concerned about the poor level of community care that will result from regionalizing the two services in one facility and have tried to be diplomatic up to this point.

"But we'll fight this to the last ditch and we're not backing off one inch from our position," Wallace said.

He said 1,000 copies of a petition have been circulated as part of a campaign to save the two services at the Royal Jubilee.

Wallace said of the 75 general practitioners who have already signed, 25 are on the Victoria General Hospital staff.

Wallace said he is dismayed and disappointed that the commission has chosen to ignore a strong cross-section of opposition.

Until now, Wallace said, the campaign to save pediatric and obstetric services at RJH has been low-key but the time has come to advertise and intensify the campaign.

He noted that the commission originally was 10-9 in favor of regionalizing the services at Helmcken.

And he claimed that commission chairman Charles Perkins' statement that time would vindicate the decision is illogical.

"What if he's wrong?"

Wallace, who was not at the commission's meeting, said he has been told some of the reasoning behind the vote was that commission members were told regionalizing the service at Helmcken Road would save the lives of 12 babies per year.

"What are they trying to say, that they are dying at the present time? That's nonsense, a blatant abuse of statistics."

Meanwhile, a city council debate on the issue fizzled into nothing Thursday as aldermen declined to take a position.

They merely received and filed a report from committee bouncing the issue back to council.

Council earlier this month bounced it down to the committee level after listening to arguments from Wallace and Dr. Derek Carroll, who favors the regionalization plan.

Council decided their opinion was irrelevant as the CRD's hospital planning commission has already reconfirmed a decision to have all newborn and children's medical services at Helmcken.

Ald. Bill McElroy said he was told by hospital planners there is still a possible compromise in which the move would go ahead while leaving a unit at Jubilee. It would gradually reduce services over the years.

But his colleagues told him the proper forum for any such attempt was the CRD. McElroy, one of the city's CRD members, said he will pursue it there.

What would Brundage have done?

LONDON (AP) — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, maintains his low profile as the Olympic Games in Moscow crumble away.

More than 40 national Olympic committees have said they will not send athletes to Moscow because of the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

"I would never attempt to influence them," said Killanin, the 65-year-old Irish peer whose quiet diplomatic manner contrasts with the aggressiveness of his predecessor, Avery Brundage.

What would Brundage have done in the present situation? The question always comes up in an Olympic crisis — and the Games have faced quite a few since Killanin took over from Brundage in 1972.

Last week the West German NOC decided to join the boycott. It was a vital blow to the Games, because West German athletes finished fourth in the medals standings at the 1976 Games in Montreal and would have been strong contenders in Moscow.

John Rodda of the London Guardian, a long-time reporter of the Olympic scene, said on British television: "If Brundage had still been president he would have been in Duesseldorf for this (West German) meeting."

Instead, Killanin was in Washington, waiting for an interview with President Carter which nobody, including Killanin himself, expected would yield anything positive. He asked Carter to consider lifting the embargo on American athletes going to Moscow. The U.S. president refused.

If Brundage had still been around, and living up to his reputation, he probably would have been defying governments right and left at this moment.

He was always the purist, defending the ideals of the Olympic Games as a supra-national movement outside of governments and politics, uncompromising in his idealism and abrasive in his public comments. He never once faltered in his defence of the Olympic Charter in his 20 years as IOC president.

Brundage, if true to form, might have gone to Colorado Springs last month to harangue the U.S. Olympic Committee and call on its leaders to ignore the White House and send athletes to Moscow.

He might have gone to Duesseldorf. This week he might have been jet-hopping to Tokyo and Sydney, whipping into line the NOCs of Japan and Australia, the last two major sporting powers still undecided on Moscow.

But would Brundage have done these things? Nobody really knows, because he never had to deal with such a situation. In fact he was never faced with any of the major problems that Killanin has had to handle.

In the last eight years the troubles of the Olympic movement have piled up as never before.

But he never saw a whole continent walking out of the Olympics at the 11th hour as a political protest. That is what 26 African countries did at Montreal when New Zealand sent a rugby team to South Africa.

He never clashed with a government which refused to admit athletes recognized by the IOC. In 1976 the Canadian government shut its doors on the Taiwanese because the IOC called them the Republic of China.

And he never had to defend the Olympic Games against a boycott by half the countries of the world because the host country was engaged in a military action.

"If Brundage had still been president the Games would never have been awarded to Moscow in the first place," said a longtime Olympic observer.

"Well," Killanin commented quietly, "we awarded the Games to Moscow back in 1974, and nobody objected at the time.

"In fact the whole world seemed to think it was a good idea. It was a period of detente."

From the start of the crisis, when Soviet troops moved into Afghanistan and Carter opened his campaign for the boycott of the Games, Killanin has lain low and said little in public, although he has spent hours every day talking to IOC members on the phone or dictating wire messages.

He avoided all press and television interviews.

"Perhaps I shall be remembered as the man who presided over the breakup of the Olympic Games," he said quietly. "But I have felt through these last few months that the less I said the better.

"All over the world NOCs have had to make difficult decisions, and some have been under heavy pressure from their governments. I thought it right to leave them to work out their problems for themselves.

"I don't mind being criticized. Some people in the Olympic movement think I should have gone to see President Carter and (Soviet) President Brezhnev sooner than I did. . . . I don't think I would have achieved anything."

"I understand the book states the Games were awarded to Moscow as recognition of the Soviet system and Soviet foreign policy," Killanin said in an interview. "I told President Brezhnev quite plainly this was not so.

"I said the Games were awarded to Moscow purely in recognition of the Soviet Union's contribution to sport."

Baseball strike averted

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball's longest night has resulted in a settlement of the lingering contract dispute between players and management and averted a strike which threatened unprecedented interruption of the major league season.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the union, and Ray Grebey, chief negotiator for the 26 owners, struggled through a marathon day and night of negotiations, finally hammering out an agreement in a seven-hour wrapup session.

Terms were not disclosed immediately because the settlement must be presented to the Player Association's Executive Board and membership for ratification. Neither party would comment on the final disposition of the difficult free-agent compensation issue, the major stumbling block throughout the talks.

"We've reached an agreement for four years," said Grebey. "We think it's a good one. There's something in it for everybody."

A source close to the club owners told The Associated Press the agreement gives owners compensation on the free-agent issue similar to what they wanted but that it doesn't take effect in 1980.

Bob Boone of Philadelphia Phillies, National League player representative, said by telephone there was an understanding on the free-agency issue but that it wouldn't happen this year.

Boone also said he was surprised by the agreement.

"Last week I lost interest in the whole thing," he said. "I saw no way (of reaching an agreement). Actually Thursday morning I was relaxed, just sitting around and waiting for the inevitable.

Miller called the settlement a victory for both sides. "That's what collective bargaining means," the union chief said. "When you reach an agreement without a strike, it's a great victory for everybody concerned."

The settlement means today's games will be played as scheduled. Grebey said only one team might have transportation problems but that he expected the schedule to be followed.

"It's a good deal all around," said league commissioner Bowie Kuhn, who made his first appearance in the talks. "There was a lot of honest goodwill all around. The parties worked hard at it. I'm ecstatic."

The mutual victory was not easy to achieve and several times as the final day of negotiations stretched into night, it seemed a strike was inevitable.

The settlement provides a new collective bargaining agreement, with improvements in minimum salaries and pensions among other items.

The key issue throughout was the clubs' demand for a system of free-agent compensation, allowing teams losing a premium free agent to receive a replacement. The union had rejected the owner formula for determining whether a player warranted compensation and there was no immediate indication of what compromise might have been reached to permit a settlement.

SMILES ALL AROUND marked this early-morning scene in New York today. Marvin Miller, right, executive director of the Players' Association, listens while Ray Grebey, chief negotiator for the 26 major league baseball club owners, announces that a baseball strike had been averted by 11th-hour negotiations. Weekend sports Harness racing, soccer, lacrosse, cricket, car racing and softball are all on tap for Greater Victoria sports fans during the first part of the weekend.

Or, if the weather doesn't permit outside activities, there's the usual profusion of televised action.

TONIGHT

Harness racing is scheduled at Sandown Raceway with a parade to the post at 5:20. Another program starts at 1:20 p.m. Saturday.

In softball, Royal Oak takes on Athletics in a Stuffy McGinnis Men's League game at Central Park.

At Sanscha Park, a Sidney Men's Association game pits Prairie Inn against Harvey's Sporting Goods at 6:30.

Remco Office Systems tackles Ingraham in a Heywood Men's League tussle at 6:30 in Heywood Avenue Park.

And, at the same time at Macdonald Park, Trafalgar Legion faces Coast Projects and Mega-Power meets Labatts in Macdonald Men's League play.

SATURDAY

Soccer fans have a chance to watch the Procincial Cup final between Victoria Wests and Vancouver Umberto-Columbus at 2:15 p.m. in Royal Athletic Park.

All lacrosse action will be at Memorial Arena with the Victoria Shamrocks facing New Westminster Salmonbellies in a Western Association game at 8 p.m.

In softball, Victoria Budgets take on Peterbilt in a Northwest Men's League doubleheader starting at 7 p.m. in Royal Athletic Park. They play Seattle Westside in another league doubleheader at 1 p.m. Sunday at the same site.

The Heywood Men's League invitational tournament gets underway at 8 a.m. at both Central and Heywood Avenue parks. Action continues at both parks starting at the same time Sunday with the final scheduled for 5:30 p.m. at Central.

Auto racing action at Western Speedway will feature a full slate of stock car and jalopy racing beginning with time trials at 7.

And, in cricket, Metchosin tangles with Albion at Metchosin and Castaways face Saanich at Beacon Hill Park in 1 p.m. Victoria and District Association encounters.

Television

The highlight of the schedule is the sixth game of the best-of-seven National Hockey League playoff for the Stanley Cup between Philadelphia Flyers and New York Islanders at 11 a.m. on Channels 2 and 6.

On the same channels, at 12 noon, Sportsweekend will include coverage of the Canadian gymnastics championships from Alma, Que.

On Channel 13, wrestling is on at 10:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

Channel 5 offers baseball at 11:15 a.m. with regional coverage of either the Los Angeles Dodgers at Chicago Cubs or Cleveland Indians at Boston Red Sox game.

The tennis "Players International Tournament" will be show at 1:30 p.m. on Channel 8 and the same channel offers wrestling at 3 p.m. and Wide World of Sports at 3:30.

At 2:30 p.m., Channel 7 will cover the Memorial Cup golf tournament.

Racquetball will be the subjeet at 3:30 p.m. on Channel 2.

Mishaps kill two

Two lives were lost Thursday in sports-related accidents.

In Cleveland, professional basketball player Terry Furlow was killed in a single-car crash in suburban Linndale. Furlow's car went out of control and crashed into a utility pole, police said.

Furlow, 25, was a guard-forward with Utah Jazz of the National Basketball Association.

Tim Vail, 19, of Indianapolis, a spectator at the final practice session for the Indianapolis 500-mile race, was killed when his four-wheel-drive vehicle overturned after he apparently swerved while trying to avoid a mud puddle in the spectator area known as the snake pit in the infield of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Empire is saved as Flyers hit back

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — Now showing: The Empire Strikes Back.

The imperial Philadelphia Flyers, National Hockey League regular-season champions, marshalled their forces to deliver a blow against the rebellious New York Islanders, winning the fifth game of the best-of-seven Stanley Cup final 6-3 Thursday and cutting the underdogs' series lead to 3-2.

The sequel is projected for 11 a.m. PDT Saturday from Uniondale, N.Y., a time dictated by the fact that the game will be televised on the CBS network in the United States.

Rick MacLeish scored two goals, Bobby Clarke, Mike Busniuk, Brian Propp and Paul Holmgren scored one apiece against New York goaltender Billy Smith. Stefan Persson scored two goals and Bryan Trottier one for the Islanders, who finished fifth over-all in the regular season.

"We tried to keep control of our movement and not worry about their movement," said centre Ken Linseman of the Flyers.

"We did that, and we forechecked well. The only games we've forechecked well, we've won."

Goaltender Pete Peeters said the Flyers, facing series defeat with every game after a 5-2 loss at Uniondale last Monday night, took the attitude that they would turn the tables on the Islanders.

"We hadn't gone well the whole series," he said.

We decided the other night that the pressure was off us; it was on them.

"They had to win the last game."

The Flyers were slow to rise to the challenge, Peeters said, but now they could be formidable.

And they were formidable Thursday. A capacity Spectrum crowd of 17,077 thundered its belief in its heroes, and Cid Barnes, wife of sit-out defenceman Norm Barnes and sporting a 7-0-2 won-lost-tied record in games for which she had sung the national anthem, belted out The Star-Spangled Banner.

Suitably spurred, the Flyers charged out of the gate, only to be foiled on several early chances by Smith. Then the Islanders struck, Persson firing from 35 feet on the power play in the 11th minute for a 1-0 lead. But the Flyers fought back and took the play away from the Islanders.

"Peeters made some really big saves for us when we killed off some early penalties, and we gained confidence as it (the game) went along," said Flyers coach Pat Quinn.

"We played much better tonight and, of course, we got a couple of big goals from Rick.

Holmgren, who had a wrenched knee, and Jim Watson, with a damaged collarbone, returned to the lineup only after much soul-searching by the Flyers command.

The upstart Islanders, seeking their first Stanley Cup title in their eighth season, have never underestimated the force with which they are contending.

Defenceman Dave Langevin said: "Before the game we were pretty excited. We knew we needed only one more win, and I thought we might get it after the way we played in the first period.

"It's nice to go home for the next game, but I don't care where we win it — I just want to win it."

Willers wins third title

ABILENE, Tex. (CP) — Harold Willers of British Columbia's Simon Fraser University won his third consecutive hammer throwing title Thursday during the three-day National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics track meet.

Willers was dejected after his meet-winning throw of 59.56 metres.

"I'm extremely disappointed I didn't get the record," said Willers, a junior.

Bottlers connect

Victoria Bottlers, an intermediate "A" squad, tripped Esquimalt-Victoria Southend Productions, a junior "B" team, 11-8 in an interlocking lacrosse game Thursday night at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Glen Jay set the pace for Bottlers with three goals, Shawn Dheensaw added two goals and singles were produced by Frank Wendt, Wayne Christiaens, Doug Barnes, Dave Carlisle, Gord Christiaens and Drew Speirs.

Scott Mathewson (3), Tony Troughton, Randy Hodgkinson, Gord Drabye, Marv Desjarlais and Tom Woods replied for Southend.

Burrows almost ready

Bob Burrows turned out to practice Thursday, but it isn't time, yet, for him to pick up the slack in the Victoria Budget infield.

The slack this weekend is created by Peter Songhurst. The defensively-solid first baseman may have to miss Victoria's four scheduled Northwest Men's Fastball League games at Royal Athletic Park. A teacher, Songhurst is committed to an out-of-town field trip while his mates run up against Seattle Peterbilt on Saturday and Seattle Westsides on Sunday.

Burrows, the home run-producing catcher-first baseman, would have been a welcome substitute. Recovering from a broken bone in his left (non-throwing) arm, Burrows turned out Thursday for his first workout since the injury.

He feels he could play but field manager Harvey Stevenson would prefer Burrows extend the recuperation period rather than risk re-injury.

PETE SONGHURST
. . . doubtful starter

Since Burrows can throw, an alternative solution would be to play him at first and go with a designated hitter.

Otherwise, newcomer Bob Wilson, impressive since making the jump from the Stuffy McGinnis Men's League, may go all the way at first base for Budgets.

Budgets, with a 6-2, won-lost record, share the NMFL lead with Peterbilt and Westside but it is the former club that may be Victoria's main rival in the run for first place.

Pitcher Graham Arnold, catcher Butch Batt and infielder George Nokes all have earned all-American status in the past and anchor a team that has an excellent defense as well as an always-dangerous offense.

Doubleheaders get under way at 7 p.m. Saturday and 1 p.m. Sunday.

Wind hampers action in some salmon spots

Wind, sometimes coupled with a plain lack of fish, has slowed down sport salmon fishing in several Vancouver Island areas.

In a few spots, however, you can still connect with a fair-sized catch.

Only a few chinooks to 12 pounds near Otter Point, the Bluffs and Secretary Island relieve the picture for Sooke fishermen.

Action has started to pick up slightly at Becher Bay. Rob Lindsay took a 37-pounder over the long weekend from Beechey Head and other hefty chinooks have been taken off Aldridge Point. Best results were noted on Squirts, anchovies and minnows with around 80 feet of line and two pounds of weight.

"Not too bad" was the word from Pedder Bay, where W. Ormiston landed a 29-pounder Sunday while trolling a Squirt in Whirl Bay. On the same day, Alex Davyduke boated a 25-pounder while driftfishing with a Pirkens in Race Pass and Brian Waddell Jr. landed a 22½-pounder Saturday on an anchovy near Church Island.

More fish in the nine-to-18 pound range are showing and Squirts have also been productive.

Joe Gilmour topped the catch at Oak Bay with a 27:08-pounder taken Monday on super-strip on the Flats. A few chinooks are also coming from Discovery Island and The Gap with Squirts and hootchies among the best choices for terminal gear.

Out Sidney way, Phil Perry boated a 30:02-pounder Monday morning while wielding a Stingsilda off the James Island powder wharf and other fair catches were reported off Sidney Spit on strip.

Action has picked up a little at Deep Cove but you have to go deep (over 200 feet) with strip to land chinooks to 10 pounds in Satellite Channel.

Things have slowed down a little in Saanich Inlet with only a few chinooks to 12 pounds showing off McKenzie Bay and Bamberton. Try using strip or hootchies at the 75 to 80-foot depth early in the morning.

Chinooks to 20 pounds are turning up in fair numbers in deep waters at the Hall's Boathouse end of Finlayson Arm. Squirts, strip, minnows and Tomic plugs are all working well.

Further up-Island, a few chinooks to 20 pounds have been caught on strip in Sansum Narrows and Active Pass.

Nanaimo and Port Alberni fishermen, on the other hand, are in the midst of a poor spell.

Buzz-bombers are landing chinooks to 12 pounds off Bates Beach and fishermen willing to venture out to nearly the middle of the Strait of Georgia have been picking up good catches of bluebacks.

Blues to 3½ pounds and a few chinooks to 20 pounds form a fair catch at Campbell River in the vicinity of the Red Can, Village Island, Quathiaski Cove and Copper Bluff.

Trout fishermen are still picking up some good catches in a few Island lakes and streams.

Fairy and Lizard lakes near Port Renfrew are producing and fly fishermen working the top end of the Cowichan River are coming back with a few brown trout around 20 inches. Anyone fishing the Cowichan, however, should carefully read the current fishing regulations and note that the minimum size limit on browns — which isn't listed with the specific regs on the Cowichan — is now 40 cm.

Other lakes with good trouting are Cowichan, Somenos, Dixon, Comox, both Upper and Lower Campbell, Echo and most of the Sayward Forest lakes.

NIBBLES: Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association members will stage their annual salmon derby from dawn to 2 p.m. Sunday in all waters from Saanich Inlet around to Port Renfrew . . . Weigh-in will be at the Juan de Fuca Recreation Centre (west end) no later than 2 p.m. and refreshments will be available for both adults and children . . . Tickets are $3 for senior members and $2 for juniors (age 17 and under) . . . Derby tickets and memberships may be purchased at either Robinson's or Gordon's sporting goods.

Three go two-for-two as mutuels jump again

By BILL WALKER

It was a night for repeaters at Sandown Harness Raceway Thursday.

The 65-day summer meeting at the suburban track near Sidney is only three days old but already three horses have their second victory.

Paul Bruiser, Conestoga Tiger and Pineland N each scored a second win in as many starts before a crowd of 930, down obviously because of the NHL Stanley Cup telecast, but which neverthless wagered a tidy $94,259.

The mutuel total was a 25 percent increase over the corresponding day last year and the third straight increase of that proportion for the handle.

Paul Bruiser, driven by Miles Armstrong, captured the first race; Conestoga Tiger, with Joe Hudon in the seat, the second and Pineland N, with Jim Gagnon driving, the third.

It is likely that the pattern of repeaters will continue judging by the entry list for the next two days.

Entries for tonight and Saturday show a shortage of stock with several horses running for the third time, while Saturday's card is a skimpy one with three of the races featuring only five starters and two, six. Only three of the 10 races filled.

Grant Hollingsworth and Hudon each drove two winners Thursday. Hollingsworth was in the sulky for Silent Slade ($4.10) in the eighth and Nechako Chris ($13) with a come-from-behind win in the 10th.

Hudon's other victory was with Phantom Dancer ($9.50) in the fifth. Eager Song ($17.10), driven by Al Bowman was an upset winner in the featured ninth.

The triactor of Nechako Chris, Scotsmans First and Montecristo Chip returned $289.10 in the 10th with Eager Song and Combat Lands combining for the best exactor of the evening, $84, in the ninth.

Racing resumes tonight with first post at 5:30 p.m. First post Saturday is 1:30 p.m.

Thursday's results are on page 24.

McNabb quits post, Nicholson gets job

From coach of the year in the Western Lacrosse Association to retirement — in only six games.

That is the story of Larry McNabb of Nanaimo Timbermen.

McNabb, voted coach of the year in the WLA last season, said Thursday he was stepping down as coach of the Timbermen for personal and business reasons. He will be replaced by backup goaltender and former club general manager Earl Nicholson.

The Timbermen have a 2-4 record and are in fourth place in the five-team league.

Mac Maude is the regular Nanaimo goalkeeper while Scott Marshall, who was acquired by the T-Men in the deal that sent rookie Tarey Pollock to the Shamrocks, now is the backup.

Marshall elected not to return to the Irish this season as a backup for all-star goalkeeper Larry Smeltzer simply because he wasn't seeing enough action.

McNabb, who coaches the Nanaimo Clippers of the B.C. Junior Hockey League, says he just doesn't have the time to devote to the team and his family.

Oddly enough, Joe McCrea, embryo coach of the Shamrocks, works for McNabb in Nanaimo and said that McNabb really didn't want to coach lacrosse and had to be coaxed into it in the first place.

Nicholson will get his baptismal Saturday night when the T-Men host Coquitlam Adanacs.

And it may be a severe test, even though the Timbermen defeated the A's 20-17 in their first meeting as Ron MacNeil scored nine goals.

The Adanacs Thursday withstood a furious third-period rally by New Westminster Salmonbellies to hang on for a 13-12 victory and get a share of first place with the Salmonbellies before 500 fans at New Westminster.

A goal by Moe Jodoin at 15:44 of the final period proved to be the winner.

Mike Reelie and Rico Bellusci scored three goals each for Coquitlam while Mario Govorchin, Kevin Parsons, Matt Aitken, Frank Nielsen, Dan Wilson and Tim Kelly added singles.

Wayne Goss scored four goals to lead New Westminister and Mark Tuura scored twice.

New Westminster goalie Rod Banister stopped 58 shots while Coquitlam's Greg Thomas stopped 36.

Shamrocks are home to the Salmonbellies at Memorial Arena, Saturday, following which the Shamrocks Booster Club will hold a "Rock with the Rocks" dance at Victoria Curling Club.

Game time is 8 p.m.

	P	W	L	T	F	A	Pts

Nanaimo	6	2	4	0	73	85	4
Vancouver	8	1	7	0	89	104	2

Next games: Saturday — New Westminster at Victoria; Coquitlam at Nanaimo.

Good night for Holmes

Ron Holmes drove in three runs with three hits to spark Farmer Construction to a 9-1 decision over Quadra Warehouse in a Victoria Cosmopolitan Senior Baseball League game at Lambrick Park.

Mike Finlayson and Mike Baier added two hits each to support winning-pitcher Ralph Anderson, who relieved starter Terry Adams in the fourth inning and held Quadra hitless the rest of the way.

Bruce Collins smashed a home run for one of the three Quadra hits.

Canadians into fours

WEST BERLIN (Reuter) — West Germany beat Britain and Australia survived a scare before defeating Sweden in the championship quarter-finals of the women's Federation Cup team tennis tournament Thursday.

Meanwhile, Canada advanced to the semi-finals on the consolation side by taking an unbeatable 2-0 lead against Poland. France, the Netherlands and South Korea also advanced to the consolation semi-finals.

Bettina Bunge routed Sue Barker, 6-2, 6-0, to give the West Germans a 1-0 lead over the third-seeded Britons and Sylvia Hanika clinehd the victory by upsetting Virginia Wade, 4-6, 6-1, 7-5.

Sweden's Lena Sandin upset Australian Dianne Fromholtz, 6-2, 6-3, in the opening singles of their contest. The Australians, No. 2 seed, tied the match 1-1 when Wendy Turnbull beat Lena Bohm 6-1, 6-3.

Australia won the match by taking the doubles when Fromholtz and Turnbull defeated Bohm and Helen Anliot 6-3, 6-2.

The other two championship quarter-finals were to be played today when the United States faced the Soviet Union and Romania played Czechoslovakia.

Annual field day event at Gorge Vale Sunday

Holly Warne and Lindsay Allan of Vancouver Quilchena will defend the Birks low gross trophy while the host club will be out to retain the Esquimalt team trophy when the annual South Vancouver Island women's field day is played Sunday at Gorge Vale Golf Club.

A total of 82 pairings are entered in the best-ball competition.

Play begins with a shotgun start at 9 a.m. All competitors are asked to report at least 30 minutes earlier in order to reach their starting tees.

Tee assignments will be posted with the starter or at the pro shop.

Tally-Ho benefits from late mistake

One of five errors played a major role in the outcome as Tally-Ho edged Tod Hackett Construction 1-0 in a 10-inning Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League duel Thursday.

John Martin led off with a double in the 10th and scored on a throwing error by losing pitcher Nick Nicholas, who only allowed four hits while going the distance at Central Park.

Paul Kraeling followed Martin with an attempted sacrifice and Nicholas, who fielded the ball, threw high to first baseman Paul Morrison.

John Barnes picked up the pitching victory after allowing eight hits, three bases on balls and striking out one batter.

Vern Benn and Brian Grexton each had two hits for Tod Hackett and Al Goldade had a pair for Tally-Ho.

At Hyacinth Park, Pam Jones pitched her seventh win of the season while guiding Island Dryco Breakers to a 2-1 decision over Victoria Athletics and New York-New York dropped McDonald's Furniture 17-3 in Victoria-Saanich Senior Women's League games.

In the Heywood Men's League, Barry Werbowski smashed a two-run homer in the first extra inning to give Mears Realty a 3-2 nod over Victoria Athletics at Heywood Avenue Park.

At Macdonald Park, Mike Reimer pitched a four-hitter and Greg French led off the game with a home run to give Mayfair Inurance a 1-0 decision over The Saints and James Bay edged Rebels 8-7 in Macdonald Men's League action.

Beken of Cowes to catch the race

KEITH BEKEN
. . . Swiftsure guest around our shores

On the eve of Swiftsure the most famous marine photographer in the world is here to capture on film the most prestigious sailing event in the Pacific Northwest.

He's Keith Beken, better known as Beken of Cowes.

His son, Ken, was here two years ago and the family's 1980 calendar reflected his visit with pictures of such local favorites as the Canadian navy's ketch HMCS Oriole.

Ken is the third generation photographer in the family, his grandfather Frank having started taking marine pictures in 1880.

Both the elder Bekens were chemists by profession but the floating real estate that steamed and sailed by their pharmacy window drew them like magnets.

Keith Beken, now 67, sold the pharmacy about 15 years ago. Now he and his son live by their pictures and the calendars, which, seven years after the first one was sold, have made the Beken name famous in most of the countries in the world.

Stored in their unpretentious shop on the Isle of Wight are about 90,000 negatives, ranging back to the days when Cowes was the "royal watering place" for Europe's royal families.

One of the most important negatives in the collection is a picture Frank Beken took of the liner Titanic as she steamed out of Southampton on her fatal maiden voyage.

The Bekens have been around water all their lives and it wasn't difficult for Keith Beken to decide what to do when the Second World War broke out. He joined up with the Royal Air Force and ran a 73-foot air-sea rescue boat.

When at home the Bekens use a Boston whaler as a "studio". Tomorrow Beken will charter a boat for his first savoring of Swiftsure. Thursday he was a guest aboard Oriole for her trip from the dockyard to the Inner Harbor.

Up until 10 years ago Beken used the same camera his father designed many years ago. Now both he and his son use Hasselblads.

A French publishing company has now published his life story and the English company of Channel Press will be releasing an English version in late-July.

Beken has been distinguished by Prince Philip and works under his warrant. Generations of outstanding sailors from around the world have come to know him on a first-name basis over the years.

He freely admits "there are plenty of good photographers around, there are many more cherries on the tree that never reach the platter."

Being a marine photographer, however, is that more challenging. First you have to be a good seaman to manage a Boston whaler in rough seas and still get shots that capture the imagination and respect of boaters everywhere.

Beken says the only way you can really be an expert in the field is to be a yachtsman yourself, being able to second-guess a near knock-down or other spectacular moment and knowing how to film a boat to show her best features.

Beken will have some of the finest boats in these waters for his subjects this weekend and some lucky skippers will their boats immortalized through his shutter.

While she is no racing machine, one boat out there will be a fitting complement for the 50th anniversary of the racing of the first Swiftsure. She is Marty Muench's Amita. An eight-metre, she, too, is 50 years old.

With Swiftsure capturing most of the attention this weekend still some boaters have some excursions of their own on the agenda.

Members of the Victoria Power Squadron will have their annual buddy cruise to Maple Bay on Saturday and Sunday, more seasoned sailors accompanying members who have recently joined the boating scene.

On Sunday members of the Victoria Canoe and Kayak Club will head up-Island for a sortie on the lower reaches of the Cowichan River. They will meet at the Helmcken-Highway parking lot at 8:30 a.m. and at the White Bridge near Duncan at 10 a.m.

The Royal Victoria Yacht Club will have series racing again on Wednesday, having cancelled this week's racing to allow Swiftsure and Juan de Fuca crews to get their boats in order. Racing will get under way at 6:30 p.m.

The Cadboro Bay Sailing Association will also have series racing on Tuesday. The first race will start at 6:30 p.m.

Walzel, Lietzke share golf lead, course mark

Times News Services

Bobby Walzel's job as a crude oil purchaser is suffering this week. His share of the lead in the Memorial golf tournament stands in the way.

"This week, I may not touch it (oil)," he said Thursday after he and Bruce Lietzke equalled the Muirfield Village course record at Dublin, Ohio, with a five-under-par 67s. "I'm too pumped up."

Walzel quit the game last year. After an operation to remove a benign tumor from his rib cage, the 30-year-old Texan went to work for a small Houston refinery.

"I was down on golf. I was frustrated. But I started practicing well at Christmas time. So I decided to go back to golf."

Walzel one-putted 10 times on Muirfield's treacherous greens.

Lietzke has been a leader in his last five rounds and admits his adrenalin is in high gear.

"I had confidence coming in here," said last week's winner at Fort Worth, Texas. "It was a very casual round today. I didn't put too much pressure on myself."

Former Masters and PGA champion Ray Floyd was one shot behind at 68. Tom Weiskopf, Don Pooley, Tom Purtzer, Peter Jacobsen, and Mike Reid matched 69s.

Jim Nelford of Burnaby is in contention at 72.

At Corning, N.Y., Donna Caponi-Young set a course record with a six-under-par 66 to take the lead after the opening round of the Ladies Professional Golf Association $100,000 tournament.

The veteran bogeyed the first hole but birdied seven of her last 12 holes over the 6,286-yard Corning Country Club layout to break the course record set by Australian Penny Pulz, who shot a 68 last year.

Sandra Post, a native of Oakville, Ont., had a 76.

Nike Shoes sued for $6 million

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Runner's World magazine has filed a $6-million libel suit against the United States' largest manufacturer of running shoes, Nike Shoes.

In the suit filed in Santa Clara County Superior Court and detailed by Runner's World officials at a news conference Tuesday, the magazine claims comments by Nike officials included defamatory remarks prompted by a dispute over the publication's annual rating of running shoes.

The shoe firm announced last week that it was dropping $220,000 worth of advertising planned for Runner's World and also said it would not take part in shoe ratings until questions about the publication's relationships with other shoe companies were resolved.

JBAA pair to miss match with Welsh

Gary Dukelow of the University of Victoria and Ken Peace of Abbotsford have been named as replacements for the Canadian side which will face the Welsh "B" national side Saturday in Burnaby.

The two players will fill in for starters Ron McInnes and K.C. Walt, both of James Bay Athletic Association.

Walt is out with an injury while McInnes is sitting out a one-game suspension as a result of a scuffle during the B.C.-Welsh "B" match Wednesday at Royal Athletic Park.

The international match Saturday starts at 1 p.m. and will be carried live by the CTV network.

Favorite withdraws

LONDON (Reuter) — French yachtsman Eric Tabarly, favorite to win a trans-Atlantic race due to start on June 7, has been forced to withdraw because of a shoulder injury suffered when skiing.

Aussies trip Island's best

The touring New South Wales Country team turned on the power in the second half to defeat the Vancouver Island Men's Field Hockey League team 5-0 in an exhibition game Wednesday.

It was the eight victory against three losses for the Australians, who now head for California to wind up their North American tour.

The Aussies led 1-0 at the half Wednesday and then pumped in four goals in the second half.

JBL FIRST WITH THE PROS.

MODEL L40
JBL's new L40 is one of the best 2-way bookshelf loudspeakers you can buy. Every sound is clean. Clear. Accurate. And perfectly defined. It's high efficiency means you need only 10 watts RMS per channel to drive it. And it has tremendous power-handling capability. Stop by and hear JBL's new L40. It's a lot of loudspeaker for the money.
COMPARE THE VALUE 299.95 ea.

MODEL L110
Based on the technology that produced the L212, the L110 is a three-way system that employs the same principles of wide, consistent frequency response and dispersion to approach the realism of the L212 in a bookshelf enclosure. An advanced, sophisticated cross-over network and drivers mounted in a vertical line array contribute to the L110's remarkable performance.
COMPARE THE VALUE 499.95 ea.

MODEL L-150
JBL's new L150 takes you deeper into the low frequencies of music without taking you deeper into your budget. This short-tower, floor-standing loudspeaker system produces bass with depth, power and transparency that comes incredibly close to a live performance. A completely new 12'' driver was created for the L150. And there's even more to the L150's bottom — a 12'' passive radiator. We use it to replace a large volume of air and contribute to the production of true, deep bass. Bass without boom. If you're impressed with the L150's lows, you'll be equally impressed with its highs and mids. Before you believe that you can't afford a floor system, listen to an L150. While its bottom is tops, its price isn't.

ONKYO · EPI "a perfect match"

EPI MODEL 100V
The EP1 100 has become the industry standard for bookshelf loud speakers. Leading consumer and audiophile publications have consistently given the EP1 100 their top ratings. It does everything you want a loudspeaker to do, and it does it all in a compact cabinet! And, unlike nearly every other speaker you can listen for hours to the EP1 100 without suffering listening fatique. Remarkably, the EP1 100 gives you so much, without costing so much.
COMPARE THE VALUE 119.95 ea.

EPI MODEL 120C
The EP1 120C. The sound can only be described as "remarkable." The bass is unusually smooth and deep, regardless of whether you're listening to rock or baroque and no matter how high you push the volume, it will remain that way. In addition, you get clean, open midrange and a smooth detailed high end. You get the kind of sound EP1 is famous for from as deep as 38Hz all the way up to 20,000 Hz — clear, natural, linear sound from top to bottom.
COMPARE THE VALUE 199.95 ea.

THE LINEAR SOUND OF EPI

EPI MODEL 200C
The EP1 Model 200C advances the linear sound of EP1 in 3 important directions: Extended bass response, reduced bass distortion and dramatically increased efficiency. As a result the EP1 200C has the deepest, most accurate bass response and the highest efficiency of any EP1 loudspeaker. The 200C also incorporates the renowned 1'' airspring tweeter that delivers unprecedented dispersion and clarity in the midrange and treble. This combination of optimized low frequency performance plus superior midrange and high-end performance — makes the EP1 200C one of the most impressive loudspeakers you'll ever hear.
COMPARE THE VALUE 299.95

EPI MODEL 500
The model 500 represents EP1's most advanced achievement in linear sound. This exceptional 3-way speaker is characterized by smooth frequency response, wide dispersion and extremely low distortion. The Model 500 is capable of handling amplifiers of up to 250 watts RMS yet may be driven by only 10 watts. Much research and many years of experience in sound reproduction have gone into the development of the EP1 500. No other accurate speaker system offers such high efficiency, and extraordinary power-handling capability.

ESS SOUND AS CLEAR AS LIGHT

MODEL PS8A
The ESS PS8A utilizes a newly developed heil air-motion transformer for crisp, clean, detailed high frequency response and smooth uncoloured midrange. The bass response is handled by an efficient 8'' woofer coupled to a rear mounted firbeslate passive radiator for controlled distortion free bass. The PS8A will handle 100 watts RMS yet can be driven easily with 10 watts.
COMPARE THE VALUE 339.95 ea.

MODEL BOOKSHELF I
The ESS Bookshelf I is a new model from ESS designed to satisfy the most critical listener. Whether it be classical or new wave the Bookshelf I gives accurate uncoloured response. The new improved air-motion transformer gives superior dispersion and lower distortion than any other bookshelf loudspeaker in its price class. The 10'' woofer is coupled to a 10'' fibre slate passive radiator for rich bass response down to 38 Hz.
COMPARE THE VALUE 479.95 ea.

MODEL AMT 1b
Excellence observed. Excellence expressed. the ESS feel of excellence is amply expressed in the AMT 1b, the most dramatic example of ESS's continuing devotion to intelligent design and advanced technology. The newly refined and improved 1b is a superb lousspeaker system that handles complex programming under heavy leads with great ease and clarity. The AMT 1b incorporates the most revolutionary loudspeaker development of the past half-century: the Heil air-motion transformer midrange-tweeter, recognised throughout the world for its stunningly realistic sound reproduction. The cabinetry, too, is magnificent in its finish and construction. Elegance and beauty combined with brilliant engineering make the AMT 1b a truly exceptional instrument.

You are South, both sides vulnerable, in each of the following four hands. What would you bid at the point where the question mark appears?

1. ♠10742 ♡652 ◇73 ♣A843

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	Pass	Dble
Redble	2 ♡	?

2. ♠Q65 ♡8742 ◇A83 ♣K96

1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass

3. ♠94 ♡K83 ◇KJ85 ♣QJ92

North	East	South	West
1 NT	2 ◇	?

4. ♠A5 ♡AKQJ963 ◇Q942 ♣—

South	West	North	East
2 ♡	Pass	3 ◇	Pass

1. Three spades. There is some doubt whether you should have passed one spade, but, granting that you did, there is an obligation to tell partner you made an absolutely maximum pass. To bid two spades at this point is simply not adequate — that is what you would do if the clubs were, say, Q-J-4-3. North's redouble announces much more than a minimum opening bid — for example, he may have: s AKJ83 h 9 d AK52 c K96 in which case you would surely want to be in game. North cannot expect a huge hand from you. He will surely remember that you lacked the values for a response to his one spade bid.

2. Three diamonds. You had a maximum notrump response and you can indicate this by cuebidding the ace of diamonds before raising spades later on. Second choice is to jump to four spades directly over three clubs. It would be wrong to bid only three spades at this point. That is what you would do if the king of clubs were the deuce.

3. Double. East will probably go down 800 or 1,100, and you shouldn't let him get off the hook by bidding two or three notrump instead. You don't often get such a fine chance to teach an opponent to mind his manners after your partner opens with one notrump.

4. Five notrump. This is the grand slam force, requesting partner to bid seven diamonds with two of the three top trump honors (diamonds are treated as trumps). If North has only one top honor he responds six diamonds. In either case, you plan to play the hand in hearts.

It takes all sorts! But what was that number?

We're terribly Saudi, old chaps

LONDON (AP) — Britain's foreign secretary, in a new apology to Saudi Arabia and its royal family, said Thursday a film on the execution of a Saudi princess "should never have been shown" on British television.

Lord Carrington called for a restoration of the two countries' traditional friendship and expressed hope high-level contacts soon will be resumed. Aides said he may visit Jiddah personally.

"There is no doubt about the reality of Saudi distress and anger," Carrington said. "I am personally sorry for the understandable offence which this particular film has caused to the royal family and other Saudis and Moslems everywhere."

"Having seen the film, I can say I too found it deeply offensive," he said. "It was a bad film and should never have been shown."

Nevertheless, the foreign secretary emphasized, no British government has the right to interfere with the freedom of the press or of religion.

Carrington disavowed published reports that the Saudis had cancelled some lush British contracts after the showing of Death of a Princess.

Miami 'disaster area' as Castro finale feared

Times News Services

MIAMI — The U.S. government declared riot-wracked Miami a disaster area Thursday, making it eligible for special recovery assistance. Nearly 2,000 weary National Guard troops were sent home, as the total riot damage was estimated at $200 million.

The disaster designation means Dade County businessmen and homeowners can get low-interest loans to help rebuild from the fires and lootings that erupted Saturday in a black neighborhood of northwest Miami.

As calm was reported for the third day, Florida Gov. Bob Graham arrived in the city to tour black neighborhoods torn by burning, looting and mayhem that claimed 15 lives. Graham said he opposed amnesty for the 1,267 persons arrested.

Miami police today threatened a walkout if amnesty is granted to the riotors.

A number of commentators have linked the Miami riots to the current influx to Florida of Cuban refugees. Unemployment among the state's urban blacks is running high with the American economy increasingly in the grips of a recession.

Although the Freedom Flotilla of Cuban refugees has dwindled this week, U.S. officials speculated that Cuban President Fidel Castro was "saving up for a last big shot."

The 33-day refugee total stood at more than 70,000 by this morning.

Slowdowns in the flotilla's pace in the past have been preludes to mass influxes, which strained federal receiving facilities here.

The National Guard cutback left 1,000 troops still on standby duty in warehouses and armories minutes away from the Liberty City neighborhood where the violence erupted Saturday. The rioting was ignited when an all-white Tampa jury acquitted four white former policemen in the death in Miami of a black man, Arthur McDuffie.

At the height of the crisis, 3,800 guardsmen had manned blockades.

One of four former Dade County police officers whose acquittal in the beating death of a black businessman triggered three days of rioting was in critical condition today from a suicide attempt.

Schoolgirls shot in Kabul

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Government troops in the Afghan capital of Kabul opened fire into a group of schoolgirls staging an anti-Soviet demonstration, injuring possibly up to 20 students, a Western traveler from the city said today.

The violent confrontation occured Thursday outside the Malalai High School, the source said.

He said "about 10 to 20" teen-aged girls from the school were wounded when troops fired into the crowd during one of an ongoing series of student demonstrations in the capital to protest the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan.

Students in Kabul have been staging a series of demonstrations to protest the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan.

Scattered automatic weapon fire could be heard early today in Kabul, but the city appeared calm, other travelers from the city said.

Soviet soldiers Wednesday fired into a group of school girls who took off their skirts and hand them to Afghan troops, saying, "You wear these, we'll fight the Russians," travelers also reported today. It was not known if any of the protesters were wounded.

Layton acquitted, held in Guyana cult slayings

GEORGETOWN (AP) — Former People's Temple member Larry Layton was acquitted Thursday of charges that he attempted to murder two cult defectors.

Following the hearing, he was immediately rearrested pending a hearing next month to determine whether he should be tried for the murder of U.S. Representative Leo Ryan and four others near Jonestown.

Layton has been in custody in Guyana since shortly after the shootout at the Port Kaituma airport on Nov. 18, 1978.

The airport assault preceded the mass suicide-murder of 900 followers of Rev. Jim Jones at the nearby Jonestown jungle settlement.

Computer charts congressmen's performance

By WARREN WEAVER
New York Times

WASHINGTON — A new computer service is providing instant performance ratings on all members of Congress for government officials, politicians and lobbyists who are eager to know how well the lawmakers are measuring up to their expectations.

The speed and flexibility of the system, called "Legi-Slate," have impressed the Republican campaign committees for the House and the Senate, and both committees plan to buy the service to explore the records of incumbent Democrats in an attempt to find weak spots that a challenger can attack this fall.

But the information service is politically neutral. The White House is considering subscribing to it so that it can more easily obtain information indicating the loyalty of Democrats and the vulnerability of Republicans that is not readily available because congressional leaders deny access to such data in the official Senate and House computers.

For corporations and unions that operate political action committees, the system can indicate which members of Congress deserve campaign contributions by quickly isolating their votes on issues that each group regards as critical.

Until now, anyone wanting to measure a lawmaker's record on a given issue had to search laboriously through the pages of the Congressional Record or the Congressional Quarterly, or accept the overall judgment of such groups as the Americans for Democratic Action and the League of Conservation Voters.

No breakthrough in technology is involved. It is simply that no one has ever tried before to record all actions of Congress — bills introduced, calendars, committee and subcommittee decisions and all votes — on a computer and make the information rapidly available to anyone willing to pay for it.

The new service is not cheap. Annual fees range from about $1,700 for one hour a month on the subscriber's terminal to $5,000 for four hours with the system providing the terminal. Additional time costs from $1.65 to $2.85 a minute.

For a subscriber like the Fluor Corp., the service fills two major needs. Its Washington representative, David Luken, can keep up to the minute on the status of 15 or 20 bills in addition to these of major concern that he tracks personally, saving large amounts of staff time.

Luken gets a dozen requests a day for campaign contributions from the Fluor political action committee. Legi-Slate provides him with evidence of the applicants who voted favorably on legislation of particular interest to the corporation, enabling him to be "a lot more objective" about recommendations for political donations.

The computer service was developed by Curtiss C. Grove, who operates an opinion and marketing research firm in Dallas.

Eight federal departments, including the Departments of Justice, State and the Treasury, are now using the system.

Watergate cover-up tapes slated for public listening

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Barring a last-minute hitch, Americans next week will be able to hear the tapes used in the Watergate cover-up trial and judge for themselves Richard Nixon's role in the scandal that drove him from office.

Officials at the National Archives said Thursday Nixon and 14 of his top aides appear to be allowing to go unchallenged a plan to play the tapes for the public at a special listening center, beginning Wednesday.

James Hastings, deputy director of the Nixon Presidential Materials Project at the archives, said Thursday none of the affected officials has indicated an objection.

He said the archives already has set up the listening center to carry out a mandate to make the tapes public under the 1974 Presidential Recordings and Materials Preservation Act.

Listeners cannot record the tapes, but can take notes and will have access to a transcript. When the anticipated crush of interest subsides, the archives plans to let researchers listen to all of the tapes and replay segments if they wish.

The 31 tapes include those played at the cover-up trial of former Attorney General John Mitchell, Nixon advisers H.R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman and two campaign aides. There also is one tape from the milk scandal trial of former Treasury Secretary John Connally.

Sadat's job good for life

CAIRO (UPI) — Egyptians approved almost unanimously in a national referendum Thursday constitutional amendments that open the way for Anwar Sadat to remain president for life, a resounding vote of confidence in Sadat's policies.

The six amendments also provide all legislation be based on Islamic religious law and institutionalize a multi-party system Sadat introduced in 1978, scrapping a single-party regime.

The state-controlled Middle East News Agency said "preliminary results show the sweeping majority of citizens have said yes."

The newspaper Al Akhbar in Friday's early editions said not one single negative vote was cast at about 80 per cent of 25,000 polling stations.

Another newspaper, Al Ahram, said early returns "show the amendments have received overwhelming support which amounts to unanimity."

The final results will be announced today by Interior Minister Nabawi Ismail. The amendments were approved by Parliament April 30 with a sweeping majority and officials said it was a foregone conclusion the 12 million strong electorate will endorse them.

Human organs for sale?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The alleged theft and sale of human tissues and organs at the Veterans Hospital in San Diego is under investigation and has already forced the resignation of one pathologist, The Los Angeles Times says.

An inquiry begun five months ago by hospital officials has now been turned over to the U.S. attorney's office in San Diego, an investigator told the newspaper.

The investigation centres on allegations that human organs and tissues taken in autopsies were sold to commerical biological supply houses without the knowledge or permission of surviving family members.

Wife alleges body error

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Haydee Quesada has filed a $1 million suit against the coroner's office and a local undertaker, claiming the wrong man was buried in the grave of her late husband, Lupe Quesada, 48.

Another man, Jose Luis Espinoza, 38, had died about the same time.

Both bodies were taken to the Santa Clara County morgue.

Get-rich-quick pyramid clubs sweep California

By TERRANCE McGARRY

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The get-rich-quick "pyramid clubs" sweeping southern California have brought a return of the prohibition-era mentality and its attendant ritual.

"Joe sent me" still works. It did for me.

Like Americans who drank in speakeasies in the 1920s, pyramid club enthusiasts do not think of themselves as criminals and wonder why the police don't just let them alone.

Turning to strategems well known to operators of floating craps games the world over, operators change locations nightly, post doormen, require a recommendation, or have alarm systems to alert participants to scatter.

The address I got from a friend — in return for a promise not to reveal real names — turned out to be a furniture upholstering workshop in an industrial area of the San Fernando Valley.

I thought it must be a mistake. The shop appeared deserted. Few cars were parked on the dark street.

But rapping on the door fetched a burly man in a plaid wool lumberjack shirt from behind a partition.

"Joe sent me," I said, feeling a little silly, but what the heck, that's what I was told to say.

The door opened. Behind partions blocking out the light sat about 75 people listening to the pitch.

Even if he weren't seated up front as living evidence for the inflation-strangled newcomers that a $1,000 "gift" cast upon the pyramid waters would come back as $16,000 in a week, Paul Hamilton would have stood out from the crowd.

Hamilton, a prosperous auto dealer who appeared to be in his early 30s, with a disco moustache and Beverly Hills haircut, was expensively dressed in camel's hair jacket, tie and soft European loafers. He wore an air of constrained calm, like a prospective father outside a delivery room.

Most of the rest of the crowd appeared lower middle to middle class, in work clothes, polyester pants suits, plastic leatherette jackets. Only two were black.

The coach and the monitors told wonderful tales of quick riches — ("you can throw the money on the bed and you and your wife can roll in it") and exhorted everyone to bring in more recruits.

Although the laws of mathematics will eventually topple the plan — six "generations" of the game would require participation by more than 33 million persons, or the entire population of California and some surrounding states — so many hundreds, perhaps thousands of persons have actually cashed in that the word of mouth publicity is fueling the craze.

I got a call this morning from a friend I had not heard from in years. Guessing her intention, I said I don't have $1,000 to gamble.

"Not $1,000," she replied. "This is a $5,000 pyramid. You get $40,000 back in less than a week."

Aircraft carrier Coral Sea bound for Korean waters

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The United States sent two airborne command post planes and an aircraft carrier task force toward the strife-torn Korean peninsula Thursday as high government officials pondered next steps in dealing with a potentially explosive South Korean political crisis.

The two Airborne Warning and Control System (AWACS) aircraft, dispatched to Kadena Air Base on Okinawa, and the aircraft carrier Coral Sea, moving toward Korean waters from the Philippines, were intended to underscore a State Department warning to North Korea that the United States will "react strongly in accordance with its treaty obligations to any external attempt to exploit the situation" in South Korea.

There is no indication of an impending threat of action by North Korea, U.S. officials added.

Anti-government protests raged in the provincial capital of Kwangju for the sixth straight day today and students accused army troops of ambushing two truckloads of demonstrators in a surburb of the battle-scarred city. No firm settlement was in sight.

News reports said at least 81 to 125 people were killed an more than 460 others injured in the bloody rampage that started last Sunday in protest against the government's proclamation of full martial law.

The demonstrators were reported holding out for the resignation of South Korea's new military strongman, Lt.-Gen. Chun Doo-hwan.

The U.S. State Department has urged "all parties" involved in the current civil strife to exercise restraint and — "when calm has been restored" — to seek means of resuming the program of political liberalization that was cast in doubt when the military tightened its control on the country last weekend.

Despite the presence of 39,000 U.S. troops in South Korea and massive U.S. investments there, the usable American leverage in the current fast-moving situation is modest, in the view of Washington officials.

U.S. blacks urged to join Iran struggle

Times News Services

TEHRAN — Militants holding the 53 American hostages today appealed to American blacks to join the struggle of "oppressed against the oppressors" and thousands of Iranians demonstrated in support for U.S. blacks in their fight "against the capitalist and racist system."

The nationwide demonstrations were called by religious authorities in reaction to the weekend riots in Miami, Fla., the worst U.S. race riots in a decade.

Meanwhile, Tehran Radio announced that Iran's new parliament, reportedly empowered by revolutionary leader Ayatollah Khomeini to decide the hostages' fate, will be inaugurated next Wednesday after a series of preliminary meetings.

There were indications the convening of the Iranian parliament has been hastened as a result of last month's U.S. rescue attempt, even though it failed.

In the 15 cities, including Tehran, where American hostages are being held, demonstrators marched up to the heavily guarded buildings and shouted support for blacks and denunciation of President Carter's administration.

In addition to Tehran, other cities where demonstrations were set in front of the hostage detention centres were Mashad, Qom, Tabriz, Isfahan, Yazd, Najafabad, Shiraz, Jahrom, Mahallat, Arak, Gorgan, Hamedan, Zanjan and Ghazvin.

Syrian diplomat Adib Daoudy went to Geneva Thursday for talks with United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim in preparation for his mission to negotiate a settlement of the hostage crisis.

Waldheim chose Daoudy, a member of the five-member UN commission that visited Iran last March, to make the new trip to Iran — the latest UN effort to win freedom for the American hostages — despite the militants' claim that they won't talk to the envoy.

A European Economic Community (EEC) trade embargo went into effect against Iran on Thursday, with a united front broken by Britain, which did not make the measures retroactive to Nov. 4 — the day the U.S. embassy in Tehran was seized.

And Japan was in the process implementing a second phase of Iranian sanctions on all exports except food and medicine, but sources said Thursday Tokyo may begin buying oil again from Iran.

As the mountain went up, they were above it

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — It was a quiet Sunday morning when two young geologists — one of them afraid of flying — took to the skies over Mount St. Helens for a glimpse of the serene volcano.

Then the mountain exploded beneath Dorothy and Keith Stoffel's tiny airplane with a force greater than an atomic bomb and they raced for their lives seconds ahead of a cloud of gas and smoke.

"Everyone knowns our survival was a million-to-one shot," Mrs. Stoffel said Thursday.

Stoffel, 27, and his wife, 30, of Spokane, Wash., received government permission to fly over the mountain at 7:50 a.m. Sunday, just 42 minutes before the eruption, and took off in a small Cessna with 23-year-old pilot Bruce Judson of Yakima.

Stoffel works for the state natural resources department and his wife works for a geological consulting firm.

"I have always been pathological about flying," said Mrs. Stoffel. "I had never been in a small plane. I had nightmares the night before. But once we were circling the mountain I was so impressed."

Snapping pictures, the couple saw little that looked out of place.

"The thing that so impressed us was that it was so serene," said Stoffel. "There was virtually no activity. Just a few wisps of steam."

They made pass after pass.

"Then we swung out and I asked the pilot to make one last pass, this time west to east," Stoffel said. "Right as we came across the crater, only 1,000 feet up, I saw the inside of the crater wall start to landslide down the steep slopes. I thought it was really neat. We were almost directly over it. The pilot dipped the plane so he could get a better view.

"It began to look like someone had just sliced a straight line right across the summit crater from east to west. Everything north of that line started to ripple and churn up. Suddenly . . . the north side of the mountain just caved away, slid away.

"I thought it was the neatest thing I ever saw in my life. I wasn't afraid. Within a few short seconds a huge blast of ash came right out . . . That's when I said, 'Let's get out of here!'"

That decision, plus a delay of a few seconds between the initial blast and the explosion that was to tear apart the mountain, meant the difference between life and death.

"I asked the pilot if we were going to get out of there alive and he said he didn't know," Stoffel said. "We dove the plane so we could gain air speed. We knew we wouldn't make it if we tried to maintain our elevation even though we were going 200 miles an hour. It still appeared we weren't going to make it. We were watching those clouds overtake us.

"The only avenue open to escape was to turn south. We turned and saw Mount Hood (in Oregon) and headed straight for it."

After they were safely away from the mountain, they began looking back as scientists. They saw steam and ash clouds and a gigantic column of material rising about 15,000 metres.

Ash and debris billowed over the whole mountain.

"Then came tremendous lightning," Stoffel recalled. "It was something! We had a front row seat."

Copters search debris for bodies, as toll tops 32

Times News Services

VANCOUVER, Wash. — The known death toll climbed to 32 and at least 52 other persons were missing today and searchers looked for more bodies around the Mount St. Helens area, devastated by a volcanic blast 500 times greater than the atom bomb dropped on Hiroshima.

Damage estimates were approaching $1 billion.

Rescue helicopters concentrated on 15 areas in the devastated region where officials said more dead may be found today as weather cleared.

Late Thursday, U.S. Forest Service spokesman Terry Virgin said a dog was found near the bodies of two victims and brought to safety, but he had no details on its location. He would not speculate on whether the animal's discovery could mean a chance of other survivors near the volcano.

Helicopter crews were airborne despite foul weather, ferrying bodies to a temporary morgue being set up at the Toledo airport.

Robert Stevens of the federal Emergency Management Agency said a disaster relief centre will be established today in nearby Kelso. He said the government is prepared to offer low interest loans, grants, unemployment compensation and housing assistance for up to one year for people displaced by the blast, which levelled thousands of acres of pristine forest and sent mud and debris racing down rivers.

The volcano ejected only steam from its gaping crater Thursday but shot its white displays up to 6,000 metres at least once. Seismic noise — which some geologists say could mean the movement of molten rock deep within the peak — was recorded during the afternoon.

Meanwhile, residents of ash-choked eastern Washington and northern Idaho received some relief as rain helped settle and clear the grit that clogged machinery, made breathing difficult and stranded thousands of travellers.

Scientists said a huge dam at the top of the Toutle River formed by a slide of mud and volcanic debris may be a permanent fixture on Spirit Lake. They earlier feared it might release water in a devastating flood.

Pete Lipman, a Geological Survey scientist, was one of two geologists who inspected the dam Thursday and flew into the crater estimated at 1.5 kilometres deep and more than three kilometres wide.

Saying the mission "was not without considerable trepidation," Lipman said Spirit Lake at the foot of the mountain is "an unattractive, evil-looking place for the dead."

And in Oregon, Portland's million-dollar shipping industry remained at a standstill Thursday as about two dozen freighters were stranded upstream from the lower Columbia River, clogged with mud and debris from the eruption.

An additional 24 vessels bound for Portland were waiting at Astoria.

Dear Abby:

I am enclosing a column you ran eight years ago when I was in high school. It helped me make a decision about drugs I have never forgotten. I wasn't a drug user, but some of my friends were into drugs and trying to get me to join them.

Now that kids in their pre-teens are trying drugs, I hope you will reprint it. You have been so good about rerunning articles that have helped people, please don't let me down. If it helps just one kid like it helped me, it will be worth it. Thank You.

Tammy

Dear Tammy:

The article you enclosed is indeed worth a rerun, and here it is:

"King Heroin is my shepherd, I shall always want . . .''

These tragic words, part of a twisted rewording of the beloved 23rd Psalm, were discovered recently in Reidsville, N.C., in a closed car alongside a dead heroin addict. She was 23 years old.

Her death was ruled a suicide. A hookup with the car's exhaust had sent carbon monoxide fumes from a running motor into the vehicle. Here's the complete "psalm.''

"King Heroin is my shepherd, I shall always want. He maketh me to lie down in the gutters.

"He leadeth me beside the troubled waters. He destroyeth my soul.

"He leadeth me in the paths of wickedness.

"Yea, I shall walk through the valley of poverty and will fear no evil, for thou, Heroin, are with me.

"Thy Needle and Capsule comfort me. Thou strippest the table of groceries in the presence of my family. Thou robbest my head of reason.

"My cup of sorrow runneth over. Surely heroin addiction shall stalk me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Damned forever.''

Also found in the car with the dead woman was the written message:

"Jail didn't cure me. Nor did hospitalization help me for long. The doctor told my family it would have been better, and indeed kinder, if the person who got me hooked on dope had taken a gun and blown my brains out. And I wish to God he had. My God, how I wish it.''

Dear Abby:

I have a friend who keeps her late husband's ashes in a fancy porcelain jar. Perhaps I should say that she claims they are her husband's ashes, because she has a rather wild imagination. The jar containing the so-called "ashes'' is not tightly capped and it looks (and smells) exactly like cigarette ashes to me!

Do you think they could be her husband's remains?

A Friend

Dear Friend:

If the cremated remains look (and smell) like cigarette ashes, that's probably what they are.

It's a common misconception that after cremation the body is reduced to fine ashes. Actually, what remains is a combination of bone fragments and ashes.

May-Ling back for concert date

By AUDREY JOHNSON

May-Ling Kwok . . . started piano at 12 — Bill Halkett photo

She describes herself as a late starter.

Yet the piquant, slender young pianist may well prove to be one of the greatest talents to emerge from western Canada in the last decade.

May-Ling Kwok remains the only contender in Victoria Music Festival history to have received a standing ovation from a festival audience. And she still remembers being stunned and brought to the verge of tears by that reception.

May-Ling is back in Victoria for a visit, and looking forward to the recital she will give Sunday afternoon at McPherson Playhouse. As much as anything she is enjoying the prospect of playing once more for a Victoria audience.

For the last few years she has been attending Indiana University where she received her Master's degree and is now studying for her Doctorate. She is rated an exceptional artist by the distinguished faculty of Indiana Music School which has an established reputation as being the finest in the United States and one of the world's best. (Juilliard in New York is probably equal but somewhat different in character).

A late starter? That means she began piano lessons at the age of 12 — in her home city of Hong Kong.

Her feeling for music was intensified when she first encountered Robin Wood at a concert he gave while on an examining tour. In her mid-teens she came to Vancouver with a married sister and family.

May-Ling enrolled in a general arts program at the University of B.C. but was still drawn to music and took some lessons from noted teacher, Phyllis Schuldt. Then following an audition with another prominent Vancouver teacher, Edward Parker (now on the Victoria Conservatory faculty) she accepted his suggestion and came to Victoria to study with Dr. Wood.

After gaining numerous awards in Canada and a Bachelor of Music degree from the University of Victoria, she went on to Indiana. There she has studied with Gyorgy Sebok; in fact, although she is now an associate instructor at the school and half way through her doctorate program, she is still studying with Sebok who is described by Wood as "probably the world's greatest piano teacher.''

Sebok has a long waiting list of students from all over the world. Incidentally he comes to the Victoria Conservatory to give master classes on the average of once a year. It's an association that has developed through May-Ling and out of respect for the work being done at the Conservatory under Wood's principalship.

The graduating recital for her Master's degree was a matter of three stages, May-Ling tells you; a preliminary audition before a panel, a performance for the piano faculty and a recital before the entire teaching faculty of the school.

During this process she was unanimously voted a Performer's Certificate, a rare distinction traditionally granted to only about one per cent of the student body.

To complete her doctorate May-Ling has yet to give eight concerts, including solo and chamber recitals and concerto performances.

Important financial assistance through this long program has come through Canada Council Senior Arts Grants.

She describes the Indiana School of Music's tremendous range of facilities which include several auditoriums, recital halls and an opera house and says the School is very strong in all aspects of musical performance. About 700 concerts a year occur on the campus. There are five full orchestras of which the first three are "really fine''.

What is an average day for May-Ling? It starts around 8:30 a.m. she says, with one to two hours of practise. There is usually a lecture at 11 and after that she teaches for a couple of hours. This is followed by rehearsals with chamber groups or one of the orchestras, then more practise and study.

"On most days I try to get out for an hour or so and walk or run,'' she says.

For her recital Sunday, which begins at 2:30 p.m., May-Ling will display her pulse-quickening artistry and brilliance in a program that includes Mozart Variations, Beethoven's Sonata in A flat Major Op. 110, Debussy's L'Isle Joyeuse, a Chopin Polonaise and Fantaisie, and Liszt's Transcendentale No.11 and Mephisto Waltz.

Heart bypass trick a modern miracle

By Dr. L.L. COLEMAN

A friend of mine, about my age (I'm 63), has had a bypass operation of his heart. I must confess my ignorance and curiosity about how this is done.

Mr. H.V.

Dear Mr. V.:

The bypass operation of the heart is one of the great, almost miraculous, surgical contributions of the century. To understand the operation, one must know something about how the heart functions.

The heart is a muscle, and, like all muscles and organs of the body, its life depends on the adequacy of its blood supply. Blood and oxygen are essential to the survival of all tissues, and are carried to the heart by the coronary arteries that surround and penetrate the heart muscle. The word "coronary'' originates from "corona,'' or "crown,'' which describes these arteries that surround the heart.

The heart muscle is only as functionally effective as is its blood supply. When the coronary arteries are narrowed by arteriosclerosis, or by spasm from tobacco, the heart muscle cries out in pain for more blood and oxygen. This pain is known as "angina pectoris,'' and is often brought on by exertion.

When one of the coronary arteries closes off completely, a portion of the heart muscle, deprived of its blood and oxygen, becomes weakened, and the so-called coronary heart attack occurs.

The wonders of the body are many and varied. Unlike other organs of the body, which can compensate for their vascular deficiencies, the heart is unable to do so. It is for this reason that the bypass operation has been created. The operation is performed by removing a large vein from the leg and inserting it into the heart muscle. In this way, blood is rerouted around the closed coronary artery (or arteries) and thus bypasses the defective artery.

The return of a greater supply of blood and oxygen to the heart revitalizes the heart muscle and helps to return it to a higher level of efficiency.

Besides the brilliant surgery, other factors also help to account for the return to productivity of thousands of people who otherwise might have become invalids because of coronary artery disease. Computerized electronic devices created by engineers, and angiogram studies of the blood vessels, can now pinpoint the number of coronary arteries that are involved and the exact site where the closure is most marked.

Bypass surgery is a modern miracle, made possible by the combined efforts of dedicated and gifted physicians and scientists.

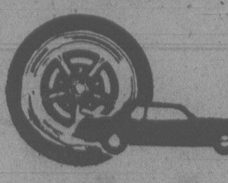
Divorces drop

WASHINGTON (CP) — The American divorce rate has dropped in the last several years, says a U.S. census official. However, the decline may be attributed to a decrease in marriages between 1971 and 1977.



wheels

by mike lamm

Dear Mike: I've always taken good care of my 1976 Plymouth Arrow and have gotten good service in return. At 30,000 miles, after routine servicing, the shop told me my brakes needed overhauling. They did some $400 worth of work, including turning the rear brake drums. When I questioned them about the need to turn the drums, they said it was common on this type of car. After driving a few miles, I discovered the brake pedal tended to pulsate during routine stops. I took the car back and complained. The mechanic said, "That happens a lot on foreign cars." Now they tell me they'll make an adjustment only to the extent of supplying labor. This particular shop sends its drums out for turning, so I have to pay for that part of it again. Have I been had?

Broke Brake

Dear Broke: Sounds like it, especially paying $400 for a brake job. That's plainly above the going rate. As for your rear drums, the shop ought to absorb the cost not only of all the labor — theirs plus the shop's that turns the drums — but also any new parts you might need. I have a feeling they'll end up replacing your rear drums.

Dear Mike: When my 1975 Malibu is cold, the engine keeps dying. This is the 305 V-8 with 2-barrel carb. I have to pump the gas to get it going again. It sometimes backfires and also occasionally dies during hard stops or sharp turns.

On Death's Door

Dear On: Several possibilities: 1) a vacuum leak, 2) a poorly adjusted float inside the carburetor, 3) a missing or wrong-sized check ball in the bottom of the carburetor accelerator pump.

Dear Mike: What could cause the compression reading in my Dodge V-8 to be 40 psi higher than the specified minimum?

What's Happening

Dear What's: I don't believe it's anything to worry about, but there might be carbon deposits inside your cylinders. Minimums listed in repair manuals are usually 25% below normal.

youth clinic

Dear Mr. Vicher: I'm a 15-year-old girl with very strict parents. My friends tell me I'm too sheltered and I agree. I am not allowed to go out at all, except when I have to go to the store.

I've tried talking to my parents, but they change the subject to when they were young (in Italy).

Some girls I know talk back to their parents, or lie to them, but I think this shows a lack of respect.

Answer: Sometimes reality is difficult and hard to accept. Your parents came to Canada from another culture, and they were raised in another culture. Naturally they will raise their children the way they were raised. I can understand how difficult this must be for you when you are living among young people who have different rules.

I do not have an easy answer because your is not an easy problem. Through your discussions with your parents, through their exposure to your school and teachers, through your friends and the parents of your friends, perhaps they will learn that to give you a little more freedom would not be impossible. However, as you struggle with your parents' wishes for you I hope that you do not become angry with your parents or their background, but rather feel some pride and gain some understanding of your own heritage.

Dear Rev. Cotter: I am 17 and my girl is 15. The thing is, we haven't made love although we are both deeply in love. I don't really care. She has discussed it with me and she doesn't want to make love at this age. I think her morals are fantastic and her virginity is beautiful and I respect her for it.

Why can't two people love each other and respect each other's wishes? To me this is love.

Am I different or alienated because of my views, or am I a nice guy but with no real sexual desire? I would make love to her but she doesn't want to and I still love her.

Answer: It is normal for you, because you are someone with a set of standards and a level head. You think your relationship with her is important and you think her views are important as well as your own. You don't want to do things just because everyone else is and you are prepared to face the truth about yourself.

I think you and she are both very luck to have one another, and I hope you can face other things in life with the strength and thoughtfulness you bring to this relationship.

Dear Dr. Powell: I'm an 18-year-old girl and I'm a little confused. I know The Pill is supposed to be a very effective means of birth control but there are supposed to be many side effects. I would like to know if the other forms of birth control are effective, especially methods used by males.

Answer: There are several other methods of birth control. With one exception these are used by the woman. The exception is the condom. If a man uses the condom every time he has intercourse, it is a very effective method. There are some accidental pregnancies which occur when the condom is used. These occur mostly because a condom may brea or slip off during intercourse. If a woman uses a spermicidal foam at the same time as the man uses the condom the combination of the two methods is almost as effective as an oral contraceptive.

Methods used by women most frequently are the IUD and the diaphragm.

All these methods with the exception of the IUD require consistent and proper use. The Pill must be taken as directed, the condom, the diaphragm and spermicidal foam must be used every time a couple has intercourse and used according to the directions given by the doctor or nurse at the clinic or the directions included by the manufacturer with the device.

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel including Marion Powell, physician; Graham Cotter, clergyman; Dr. Saul Levine, psychiatrist, and social worker Bruce Vichert.

Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria V8W 2N4. Readers wishing to talk with someone about their problems can call NEED at 386-6233.

LOSE 5-14 LBS. IN NEXT TWO WEEKS WITH THE HELP OF THE no nonsense DIET

In May of 1979 Natures own no nonsense diet was introduced to British Columbians and Albertans through the Prince Health Food chain. Within weeks they were sold out and by the end of July thousands of people had lost weight the no nonsense way.

Unlike most diets to have come along this one is not dying out, but gaining greater momentum all the time. The reason for this phenomenal growth lies inthe fact that those people who have tried the diet have gotten positive results. For example I know of one particular young lady who has been overweight nearly all of her life. She wanted desperately to lose 25 lbs., and tried every possible means over the last two years. She exercised, joined clubs and went to monthly meetings. All to no avail. After reading about the no nonsense diet, she decided to give it a try before throwing in the towel. It worked. Within a month she lost 23 lbs., within two more weeks she lost another 10 lbs. She is so ecstatic about this diet that she preaches it to anyone who will listen and has most of her friends on it.

The product is a dieter's dream; two tablespoons in a glass of partially skimmed milk is equal in nutrition to a complete meal. But without all those nasty little calories. It has all the essential amino acids, and Vitamins and Minerals in a delicious powder base. The no nonsense formula comes in two flavours, luscious chocolate and tasty vanilla.

Here is a list of the Vitamins and Minerals it contains:

Vitamin A
Thiamin
Choline
Iodine
Potassium
Vitamin E
Riboflavin
Calcium Magnesium
Manganese
Vitamin C
Niacin B6, B12
Phosphorous
Copper
Sodium
Vitamin D
Folid Acid Biotin
Iron
Zinc
d-Panothenic Acid

This is a wonderful diet because you are dealing with natural foods and not drugs, consequently it is safe and very healthy. A lot of people after going on this diet, have noticed remarkable improvement in their hair, skin and nails.

The no nonsense diet is available at these and other leading Retailers:

More Rabbit.
More fun.

The Volkswagen Rabbit GTI has more to offer inside and out.

Inside, there are features like a 5-speed manual transmission, a tachometer, a padded sports steering wheel, sports seats, AM/FM stereo cassette player with built-in twin speakers.

Outside, there's more. A large front spoiler, satin black bumpers and styled black fender flares, wide steel-belted radial tires, rear window washer and wiper.

It's a lot more Rabbit. And that's a lot more fun.

TONY DOW, left, and Jerry Mathers know that they will be shadowed for the rest of their lives by their first success, the Leave It to Beaver television series popular in the late Fifties and early Sixties. But that doesn't mean they have retired: Dow, 34, and Mathers, 31, have been on the dinner-theatre circuit with an original comedy, So Long Stanley.

Jazz lights still burning

jazz with feather

By LEONARD FEATHER
The Los Angeles Times

Has jazz reached a dead end, or are we simply watching the wrong signals?

Finding a group that calls itself Spyro Gyra at the top of the jazz sales reports, listening to the funk or fusion of David Sanborn or Earl Klugh or Ronnie Laws, all passed off as hot jazz attractions in the marketplace, the pure of heart and loyal of belief may wonder what things are coming to.

The answer becomes clearer, and our faith is restored, when we observe what is happening not on the charts, but in the accomplishments of musicians and record companies whose sights are set on higher goals.

The most encouraging evidence came to hand last week with the release on Contemporary Records of George Cables' debut album as a leader, Cables' Vision (14001).

Cables came to prominence during his five-year stint (1971-6) as pianist with the Freddie Hubbard combo.

During that time he developed a reputation as a composer of such works as Think On Me, which he recorded with Woody Shaw, and Ebony Moonbeams, heard in a Hubbard album.

It has been clear for some time that Cables is not one of your off-the-wall, energy-dominated futurists, but rather an indicator of how jazz can take a logical step into the future.

In his articulate liner notes, Cables tells us that he thinks of himself as a painter with sound, "and as any artist would, I try to see with and communicate through the soul.

"I get that same feeling from my favorite painter — Salvador Dali. There is more to his paintings than what's on the canvas. You can feel the depth."

Do not expect any Dali-like eccentricities. There is a sense of direction to each of the six works, four of which were written by Cables.

He plays piano on all but the opening track, in which his gentle electric keyboard graces the eloquent Morning Song. I Told You So, with its light Latin beat, finds Freddie Hubbard at his most expressive.

Voodoo Lady finds Cables the composer in a vaguely West Indian groove, with Watts switching to flute to create a light, easy ensemble sound. The Stroll is a duo performance, with Cables and Hutcherson in an introspective tour of one another's minds. Finally the full group returns for Inner Glow, in which Cables' contributions are masterfully interwoven with vibes and horns.

Too many of today's conventional sounds simply bore, while many of the new effects offend.

The music of George Cables has avoided both pitfalls, inheriting the best of the jazz legacy while clearing the way, through his harmonic and melodic innovations, for a definitive trip into a bright tomorrow.

Some of the same virtues reappear in Bobby Hutcherson's new album, Un Poco Loco (Columbia FC 36402). He and Cables change places, the later becoming a sideman; however, Cables contributed two works, Love Song and a new version of Ebony Moonbeams.

Variety is insured by a great deal of doubling between acoustic and electric instruments: Hutcherson doubles on marimba, John Abercrombie plays electric and acoustic guitars, Chuck Domanico electric and acoustic bass. Peter Erskine is on hand, again displaying the good taste and subtlety essential to the ideal small combo drummer.

With Poco Loco, the title tune, is an early work by Bud Powell, a bop pianist of the 1940s-50s who was wise beyond his years. Cables' Love Song has a sylvan beauty: the Jack de Johnette composition Silver Hollow is a haunting theme with affecting work by Abercrombie, and the closer, I Wanna Stand Over THere, is a Hutcherson-brewed 4-4 pressure cooker.

Role in Search for Tomorrow spurs search for old accent

By JOHN GOUDAS

"Foot-stomping, knee-slapping, hee-hawing, hat-throwing, rowdy blue grass hoe down!" That's the way Search for Tomorrow's spirited Patsy Pease, who portrays the show's feisty vixen Cissy Mitchell, described a recent farewell party given for cast-mate Danny Goldring (Beau Mitchell). That delightful vernacular is no put-on for Patsy, (Search's own country-western singer), who is from a small town in North Carolina and well acquainted with square dancing, yodeling, and fiddling.

However, her home background did nothing to enhance her long term goals. According to 23-year-old Patsy, to dream of performing was uppity, having your head in the clouds. Ironically, her first attempt toward a career was prompted by a pamphlet from the North Carolina School of the Arts that she found in the wastepaper basket of her high school guidance counsellor.

Once her audition gained her admission to the school, Patsy worked hard for the next four years — especially on dropping her accent — studying acting, singing and jazz dancing.

After a year of stock and regional theater, Patsy did a soon-to-be-released feature film entitled The Uninvited. It was during this project that she tested for a Search for Tomorrow part calling for the very accent she had worked so hard to lose.

Now settled into her role, which has spiraled into a major storyline, Patsy fondly describes Cissy's plight as The Perils of Pauline, since she is continually harassed by deceptive Lt. McKay, who kept her captive, forcing her to testify against Sunny who we all know is innocent.

So it looks like Cissy may gain some sympathy for a change — a welcome challenge for Patsy, who will now have to make Cissy inventive where she used to be devious.

"I feel like I'm being a bit of a character actress," Patsy remarked with a glow. "And I love it!"

Channel Chatter: Lovely Deborah Hobart, who recently portrayed sweet Dana McFarland on As the World Turns, has now been cast as the rich and manipulative Amy Dudley on NBC's Another World. According to Deborah, one of the advantages of playing villainesses is that they generally dress better...

Patsy Pease . . . cast as feisty vixen

There's a new young man in town on Search for Tomorrow. He's Spencer Langley played by Timothy Patrick Murphy who has appeared in two prime-time mini-series, The Seekers and Centennial as well as segments of Love Boat and Paper Chase...

Charita Bauer (Bert Bauer on Guiding Light) is narrating a show called Side By Side By Soundheim at the Elmsford Dinner Theatre in New York's Westchester County, for three more consecutive Sunday brunches, May 25, June 1, 8, and 15...

Peter Brouwer fans (Brad Hollister on As The World Turns) should be sure to catch him at their local movie theatre in the new horror film Friday the Thirteenth. This gory thriller is Peter's first venture into motion pictures...

Plot Portents: Mary begins to take interest in the world on Days of Our Lives. Also, newcomer Jarvis reveals a sharp business mind as he moves about Salem, a promising character.

Brock, a much neglected character on The Young and the Restless, displays signs of life with Julia, but Victor hovers, casting spite on his wife while Nikki makes a slow recovery.

An incoherent Steve tells Kim some shocking news that could shatter Nick forever on As the World Turns. Meanwhile, the potential for yet another catastrophe awaits Brad and Eric.

Delia learns that Tiso did her a good turn on Ryan's Hope. Jill and singer Ken George Jones discover mutual interests while Kim continues to use Michael to upset Rae and Seneca.

A familiar figure returns to Pine Valley on All My Children, while Erica creates an emergency for Tom to handle. Also, Myrtle remembers a long forgotten incident.

volunteering

The Victoria Volunteer Bureau, Canada Employment Centre and the Victoria YM-YWCA are combining forces to offer a program to women planning to return to work or seek a more challenging career.

The program, entitled Building a Career Through Volunteer Employment, begins the first of five weekly sessions Monday, June 2.

The five one-hour sessions will be held at the Y from 1 to 2 p.m. and will feature guest speakers representing employers, employment counsellors and women who have themselves found new careers as a result of volunteer experience.

"At a time when jobs are scarce, it becomes important to explore alternatives and to be innovative in one's job search and in sampling different career paths," said Margaux Finlayson, projects co-ordinator of the volunteer bureau.

"Volunteer work can prepare the individual for the job market by increasing self-confidence, developing career skills and as a way of testing a new work area," she said in a press release announcing the program. "It is a means of bridging the gap between homemaking and the outside working world — as people can take their choice of careers, learning to plan, organize, delegate, work in teams or alone, solve problems, meet deadlines, administer a budget and hire staff.

"Volunteering has become a useful route back to the working world, as volunteers use their unpaid jobs to hone old skills and acquire new ones. There is more emphasis on growth and achievement as people look for training and skill development."

Some options offered by the bureau that may be of interest to those contemplating volunteer work can be found in the following positions currently on file at the Victoria Volunteer Bureau.

A local hospital is seeking a library volunteer who will be responsible for centralizing library services offered to residents within the hospital. They will distribute, catalogue and collect books. No previous experience is necessary as training will be provided. The volunteer whould have a pleasant, independent attitude.

A women's centre needs a volunteer to solicit donations of furniture and household goods. The volunteer will be arranging storage, keeping an inventory and co-ordinating moving of the goods.

A special assistance centre is looking for volunteers to become involved in crisis intervention, counselling, public speaking, helping in the office and on their crisis telephone lines. There are many ways of helping out here, and training is provided.

A new service offering free employment counselling and placements for older people needs volunteers to provide clerical support and to develop employment opportunities for older unemployed persons. This setting may be especially appropriate for older volunteers but all ages are welcome. The service operates on weekdays and times are flexible for volunteers.

Building a career through volunteer is no pipe dream, says Finlayson.

"The many different positions filled through the Victoria Volunteer Bureau are for real jobs that demand real skills," she said. "They provide the opportunity to test different types of work , or resume an old career."

Further information and registration for the career program is available through the YM-YWCA at 386-7511. Fee for all four Monday and the one Wednesday sessions is $5 for the series.

The Victoria Volunteer Bureau is open Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and can be reached at 386-2269.

ELEGANT ROCKLAND RESIDENCE

Rarely does such a fine family home become available in prestigeous Rockland. This stately residence retains its original elegance and beauty with tasteful recent modern advancements. The home features 4 exceptionally large BRS, 3 full (4 pce.) baths, including a master BR ensuite, oversized FP in both the master BR and LR, large formal entrance hall with a grand oak stairway, gleaming oak floors, bevelled glass and stained glass masterpieces. The magnificent LR and DR with an adjoining glass conservatory were made for entertaining, as is the smashing, recently renovated and enlarged catering kitchen with adjoining cedar panelled breakfast room with custom built cabinets and wine rack. In addition, there is a large family room with custom built cabinets on the main floor. The lower level of the house features a 700 sq. ft. library and office lined with cedar. The entire residence offers total privacy and is surrounded by a network of seven foot hedges and wrought-iron gates which enclose two separate professionally maintained English gardens. A large assumable mortgage at 11½% to May, 1982 is also available. This is truly a magnificent Rockland residence with all the attributes for gracious living. MLS. Reduced to $199,500 for quick sale. HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Sleep on dear good mother, it has been long years

Since you left our hearts filled with sadness and tears

Yours was a heart that was blithesome
and gay

Scattering sunshine all along the way

You know how we love you and, yes,
love you yet

Though God took you from us,
we cannot forget.

Decision time for planters has arrived

Built-in planters in front of low windows and at entrances to the home will no doubt be getting attention right about now. Before they are planted for the summer a few things must be decided.

First the type of plants to go into the containers. They may be summer flowering annuals, or more permanent dwarf perennials, or shrubby plants such as heathers.

For any of these, the soil will need renewing. Mix the present soil well, breaking up lumps. Then remove about half the quantity, replacing with a mixture of soil from the compost heap, leafmould if any, and some coarse sand half the size of split peas, all thoroughly mixed before filling the planters. This mixture will suit summer annuals and dwarf perennials, as well as zonal and trailing geraniums.

If you are putting in summer and fall blooming heathers, use mainly leafmould, saturated peat moss and a little coarse sand.

Deep built-in brick planters will have at least six inches of course broken brick or rough stones at the bottom for drainage.

Brick planters are usually built in solid ground. Fill these deep planters several days before putting in the plants, watering thoroughly to assist in settling the soil. Also the volume of damp soil below the plants will assist you all summer in keeping the surface few inches sufficiently damp by normal twice a week watering.

When choosing plants, remember you won't want them to grow much higher than 12 inches, except in special cases for accent. Zonal geraniums, dwarf Coltness dahlias, double scented stocks can all be kept to this height.

When soil is renewed as suggested, don't add fertilizer until later in the season, about July 15 to 21, when flowering is well established and a boost in growth will produce the desired continuation of bloom. Fertilizer too early in the season produces much green growth but not necessarily flowers. One level tablespoon of 6-8-6, or a similar analysis, spread along each foot of soil the length of the planter will be enough. Water before applying and again following, to carry the fertilizer down into the damp soil to the area of the roots.

An unusual permanent feature for the planter in front of a picture window, or at an entance, is to have a small flowered summer clematis planted outside one end of the planter, in the ground soil. Arrange a rigid, halfpinch mesh wire frame about six inches wide in the form of a large handle arching over the planter.

Climbing up this broad handle, the clematis, with training and pruning will be a colorful arch over the planter.

By co-ordinating both color and form of plants in the container and the one growing over the wire handle, an unbelievably lovely effect is achieved.

Here is another way to fill planters — without soil, yet giving a change of plants during the season. Grow two or three sets of annuals in five or six-inch pots. Keep them in good growth in the garden with dappled sun, ready for when needed.

For this scheme, use well dampened peat moss, or wet fine sand in the planters, bedding the pots to their rims in the material to maintain even moisture within the pots.

Planters, either permanently filled or changing with the season, are an attractive alternative to conventional foundatio plants in front of low-built homes, and they can be unusually decorative when imagination replaces convention.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

OTTAWA — Canada should drastically increase its aid payments to the developing countries, setting an example for the rest of the western world, while at the same time strengthening its own economy, says a major study released Thursday.

The report, entitled Canada in the Changing World Economy, was produced by the respected C.D. Howe Research Institute of Montreal.

It says Canada is caught in almost impossible economic situation. It is under pressure from the developing nations to get out of the low-skill industries on which it has traditionally depended — the exploitation of raw resources and production of labor-intensive assembly line goods.

But it is trapped. It has neither the technology needed to produce more sophisticated products nor the aggressive promoters needed to sell them.

As a partial way out of the mess, the report suggests that the government look to the blossoming, but bitter developing nations. Large grants would be offered to those less developed countries willing to commit themselves to spending 100 per cent of the aid money on Canadian-made goods.

Canada would have an assured market for its manufactured goods. This would enable the country to work on its long-term objective of building more efficient factories, improving its level of technology and phasing out the resource-based industries in which its competitive edge is slipping.

"By giving large grants to the LDCs (less developed countries) Canada would be setting an example to the rest of world. The result might well be that other nations would adopt similar policies. Such assistance might well help diffuse the LDCs' growing resentment and bitterness that the rich nations as a group have failed to keep their promises of greater developmental assistance," the report suggests hopefully.

The 170-page analysis cautions that this strategy cannot be expected to work in isolation. It would have to be accompanied by:

— A new willingness among the provinces to abandon the parochialism which prevents goods being produced for a national market. Each of the provinces has some kind of buy-at-home policy which gives its own firms preference over other Canadian companies.

— Government incentives to improve the country's level of industrial technology.

— Possible government participation in the creation of new, highly sophisticated industries.

— A gradual reduction of the foreign capital flowing into Canada. This would become possible once an industrial growth plan took root because Canada would begin to acquire efficient enterprises, capable of generating their own investment dollars.

"What appears obvious," the report concludes, "is that the life-as-usual approach, on the grounds that in the long-run everything is bound to work out, is not an adequate response to the current and future environment."

Oil subsidies to go: Trudeau

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau announced plans Thursday to eliminate oil import subsidies in the foreseeable future, but gave no indication of any new government programs to take their place.

Under fire in the Commons from Progressive Conservative MPs, Trudeau said the subsidies will be phased out as Canada moves to a blended price for oil consumed in Canada.

Former finance minister John Crosbie immediately accused the prime minister of backing off election campaign statements that implied the subsidies would continue for the rest of the decade.

And in Halifax, Premier John Buchanan said the loss of the subsidies would be a severe blow to Nova Scotia's economy.

"It would be almost economic suicide they would be putting on us, and I can't for the life of me see any responsible government of Canada doing that," Buchanan told reporters.

The oil import subsidies were begun by Ottawa in 1974 to keep down prices in Eastern Canada, whose refineries are dependent on imported crude oil.

However, with world prices moving up sharply, the program has become an increasing drain on the federal treasury.

The government estimates it will pay $3.1 billion in subsidies this year, and opposition critics say the latest round of increases by oil-producing nations could push that figure even higher.

Trudeau said Thursday the blended price for oil he proposed during the campaign for the Feb. 18 election is the key to phasing out the subsidies some time after this year.

But neither he nor Finance Minister Allan MacEachen have explained in detail the relationship between the two programs.

The blended price proposed by the Liberals would be a uniform price to consumers reflecting the modest cost of extracting crude oil from conventional wells and the higher costs of importing oil or recovering it from "unconventional" domestic sources such as the Alberta oil sands.

MacEachen hinted Wednesday that a higher blended price would reduce the need for oil import subsidies. Any sharp increase, however, would be contrary to Liberal campaign promises to keep oil prices lower than those proposed by the former Conservative government — $4 a barrel this year and $4.50 the next two.

Trudeau fielded a host of energy questions in the Commons Thursday in the absence of Energy Minister Marc Lalonde, who was attending a conference of the International Energy Agency in Paris.

External Affairs Minister Mark MacGuigan was also on the hot seat because of problems in negotiating new oil imports from Mexico.

No one knew he was dead

TORONTO (UPC) — A 60-year old pensioner lay dead in his home for 16 months while the oil company filled his tank, the government delivered cheques and the lawn was mowed for him.

Roman Laschuk, who lived alone after the woman he lived with died two years earlier, apparently committed suicide in January 1979. His body was not discovered until this week.

"I was cutting the grass and keeping the lawn clean and when I found out what was going on I was really shocked," said Nick Colonello, a neighbor of Laschuk. He explained he thought Laschuk had moved to Florida or gone to hospital.

Colonello contacted police after a Hydro employee told him Laschuk's lighting bill had not been paid and he was trying to deliver a notice to terminate service.

Police entered the tidy red brick house through a second floor window, and found a huge stack of letters including uncashed government pension cheques.

Colonello's wife Margrit said Laschuk had been regarded by neighbors as "a recluse" and distant from the others on the street who often chat over garden fences and were always ready to take care of things when neighbors were away.

But she said they would gladly have helped him through his troubles. "His death seemed needless."

One police source said an apparent suicide note was found beside the body. An autopsy will be carried out, police said.

MPs' aides eye union to fight to pay freeze

OTTAWA (CP) — The salaries of the people who work for MPs have become the subject of controversy, with New Democrats demanding the workers be allowed to form a union.

The controversy emerged Thursday as it was announced that about 2,770 of the Commons employees have been granted annual pay increases ranging from $600 to $2,500 while the salaries of another 230 have been frozen.

A report on the pay increases was tabled in the Commons by Speaker Jeanne Sauve, who heads the special committee of government representatives which decides on the increases.

It was made public on the same day MPs were criticized for treating their employees as third-class citizens by the newly elected president of the Parliamentary Association of Support Staff, an organization which bargains for employees of New Democrat MPs.

Keith Reynolds said in a statement his main concern is "that employees of members of Parliament have no right to collective representation and are treated as third-class employees."

The report followed by one day a demand by New Democrat Mark Rose, who represents Mission-Port Moody riding in British Columbia, that collective bargaining rights be granted to Commons employees.

Speaking in the Commons, Rose asked Yvon Pinard, president of the Privy Council, when the government intends to extend "long overdue, basic collective bargaining rights to employees of this institution?"

Pinard responded that the working conditions of the employees who provide a wide variety of services to MPs are being reviewed.

"The welfare and good working conditions of the House of Commons employees are in good hands."

Rose said Thursday in an interview the government is placing undue hardship on some employees by freezing their salaries until a study of pay scales and job classifications has been completed.

Salaries have been frozen for 200 parliamentary publication clerks, including Hansard reporters and editors, about 25 clerks who work for Commons committees and some five top-level administrators.

$29,000 tax fine

Mel Burger, president of the bankrupt Burger Plywood Ltd, was fined $29,000 plus court costs Thursday for evading $84,945 in taxes from June, 1968 to December, 1973. He pleaded guilty to omitting $218,023 from the company's income tax statements.

Probe to name RCMP wrongdoers

OTTAWA (CP) — The royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing has ordered its lawyers to identify members of the force considered to have broken the law and cabinet ministers who might share the blame.

Mr. Justice David C. McDonald of Alberta, the commission chairman, announced Thursday that individual Mounties will be notified of any charges of misconduct to be made against them so they can defend themselves.

Cabinet ministers and officials who may have authorized or condoned such activities would also be given such notice before commission lawyers submit their final arguments during public hearings expected in coming weeks.

McDonald rejected arguments by the RCMP and government lawyers that the commission should not attempt to place blame for wrongdoing against individuals.

He said the commisson may not directly blame an individual for committing a particular offence but it may say the evidence it has heard justifies placing criminal charges by appropriate provincial attorneys-general.

Officer charged

MONTREAL (CP) — Staff Sgt. Paul Sauve, the third-ranking officer in the RCMP's Montreal narcotics division, was arraigned Thursday on three drug charges, including trafficking in 180 kilograms of hashish.

Sauve, 44, pleaded not guilty to charges of trafficking, conspiring to traffic with Gerald Hiscock, a CP Air agent, and possession of eight kilograms of hash for purposes of trafficking.

He was arrested earlier in the day by the RCMP.

Sauve, a veteran with more than 20 years service in the force, was released on $15,000 bail.

Hiscock, 37, pleaded not guilty to the same charges as well as two others of possession of restricted firearms. Sessions court judge Bernard Bilodeau set his bail at $25,000.

Passports going to $20

OTTAWA (CP) — The price of a passport will rise to $20 from $12 June 9, the external affairs department announced Thursday.

This is the first increase in more than four years and reflects increased material and labor costs, the department said in a news release.

Mac-Paps review

OTTAWA (CP) — Veterans Affairs Minister Dan MacDonald will consider requests to remove criminal status from Canadians who fought in the Spanish civil war and give them the same pension benefits as Second World War veterans.

MacDonald gave the commitment after meeting for more than an hour Thursday with about 20 veterans of the Mackenzie-Papineau Battalion, the core of a Canadian contingent which fought Fascist forces in Spain in the late 1930s, despite a Canadian law forbidding it.

The minister said in an interview he will ask legal advisers to study their requests and will take their case to cabinet.

He refused to say whether he supports them. But he said that as a veteran himself, he feels "a sort of kinship."

Rules broken, inquiry told

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Dubin commission on aviation safety was told Thursday that breaches of the regulations are common practice in the air industry in B.C.

Chief commission counsel John Sopeka said evidence gathered by commission investigators shows the practices include:

— Overloading of aircraft;

— Pilots pressured into flying in bad weather because many companies maintain a policy of not paying them unless they reach their destination;

— During peak periods pilots work inordinate hours and often fly when suffering from extreme fatigue.

The commission is examining enforcement of air regulations and standards in the Pacific region, which covers the whole of B.C. except for the Peace River country.

But the department's top aviation official in B.C. said he only has two men to carry out the enforcement of air regulations throughout the province and is "just plain stuck with limited resources."

Albert Bach, regional administrator for the Canadian Air Transportation Administration, said much of his time is spent on the department's role as landlord of airports, dealing with problems arising from duty free shops, car rental agencies and bus services.

"I have become convinced it is a great mistake to be the operator of airport terminals and parking lots," he said.

He said he cannot understand why other people do not want to take over the terminals.

"I have always regarded Vancouver International as a licence to print money," and the department takes in about $30 million a year there.

Bach said B.C. does not get its proper share of staff for the amount of air traffic in the province — it has 10 per cent of Canada's population but nearly 20 per cent of the aviation activity — and difficult flying conditions.

"We are in a bind, a very tight bind. I cannot get people," because the federal treasury board has been "absolutely rock hard" against providing extra resources in aviation administration.

Sopeka said commission inquiries showed both the courts and ministry officials are excessively lenient in enforcing air regulations.

Walter McLeish, Ottawa-based head of the air transportation administration, told the commission he has been unable to get needed changes in the Aeronautics Act under four transport ministers.

"In fact there are current legal opinions that many procedures of inspection, certification, approvals, delegation and enforcement are not enabled (authorized) by the act."

B.C. minimum wage to $3.40 July 1

By JAKE BANKY

The minimum wage rate is going up in B.C. but Labor Minister Jack Heinrich admits the two-stage increase does not keep pace with inflation.

The present $3-an-hour minimum for adults will go up to $3.40 July 1 and $3.65 next Dec. 1.

The minimum wage for those 17 years old and younger will go from the present $2.60 an hour to $2.85 July 1 and $3 an hour Dec. 1.

The hikes will benefit thousands of workers in B.C. including many in Victoria's hospitality and tourist industries.

A spokesman for the Visitors Information Centre said while the increases are fair they will probably mean higher prices in restaurants and other visitor-oriented businesses.

There will have to be wage increases for all employees, Ed Higgin said.

"When you give your lowest-paid employees an increase of 40 cents, you have to give it to those above them as well, to maintain the gap. This makes a significant impact on your wage costs."

Higgin said the industry will have to increase its prices and hope the tourists accept the higher rates.

At $3.40 on July 1, the B.C. level will still be below Saskatchewan and Quebec where it is $3.65 and below Alberta where it is $3.50.

Heinrich agreed the increases will not balance the rate of inflation over the past four years.

He said since the last increase in the minimum wage, June 1, 1976, the consumer price index has gone up about 30 per cent.

The new minimum announced Thursday amounts to a 22 per cent increase when fully in effect.

"Perhaps in years to come adjustments can be made," the minister said.

"I'd like to think the government is sensitive enough to acknowledge the cost of living and the impact it has on marginal earners."

Heinrich also admitted the government should have acted faster to improve the minimum wage.

"It probably should have been looked at earlier. There's no sense beating around the bush about it."

He gave a firm commitment that, as long as he is minister of labor, he will reconsider the minimum wage on an annual basis.

The government did look at the possibility of indexing the minimum wage to the cost of living, Heinrich said. He was reluctant to say the idea was rejected outright but he told a press conference, "It is not under consideration at this time."

Heinrich said by next December, B.C.'s minimum wage of $3.65 an hour will be in line with the highest rates prevailing in Canada.

Quebec and Saskatchewan recently boosted their rates to $3.65. Alberta increased its rate to $3.50 earlier this month. Minimum wage rates in the other provinces are in the $2.75-to-$3.15 range.

However NDP labor critic Karen Sanford said she is disappointed.

"This is the absolute minimum the minister could have introduced. I don't think it's adequate.

"A rate of $3.40 or $3.65 is still going to make life difficult for the people who have to survive on the minimum wage."

The labor minister said there are no reliable statistics on the number of British Columbians now receiving the minimum wage.

Many of those are in the hospitality industry, Heinrich said, and the industry has not objected to the increase.

The minister met with industry representatives before making his announcement. "They were aware the minimum wage had to be adjusted and it was acceptable to them," he said.

Centre backers win 5-3

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Two months of controversy over the convention centre came to an end Thursday night as Victoria city council decided 5-3 to let the $8 million waterfront project go ahead.

But there was something in the decision for both sides.

Mayor Bill Tindall announced that because of the objections about the design, the centre will be lowered by eight or nine feet to block less of the view from Wharf Street.

Dr. Arne Lane, president of the Pan-Pacific group which has organized the project, said construction could start by June 15.

Council held two votes on the proposal, the first a 5-3 decision to amend the harbor zoning to permit public buildings such as the convention centre. The second was a unanimous vote to issue a development permit.

The proposed changes to the design mean the centre will come back before council one last time next month after city planners

Two escape after island shoot-out

An RCMP manhunt was under way today in the wake of what's being called the Gulf Islands gun battle.

Police using a tracking dog are seeking two men wanted in connection with a robbery and shoot-out on tiny Jackscrew Island Thursday afternoon.

Officers are concentrating their hunt on Galiano Island where a small boat in which the robbers made their get-away was found on a beach near Porlier Pass early today.

Sgt. Mitchell Hanks of the RCMP detachment in Ganges said no one was injured in the shoot-out.

The incident started when a middle-aged man and his wife — police withheld their names — returned to their home on Jackscrew Island about 2:30 p.m. to find two men carting off their belongings.

Hanks said the intruders had removed a quantity of goods including jewelry, liquor, a chainsaw and a shotgun when they were interrupted by the couple returning from a shopping trip in Ganges.

Postal talks founder again

OTTAWA (CP) — Postal contract talks were on the verge of a breakdown today as government and union negotiators reached an impasse on a proposal for a shorter work week.

An official at union headquarters said an agreement between the two parties on a reduction of weekly work hours to 37½ from 40 was part of an agreement in principle on a contract reached Tuesday.

However, negotiators have been unable to agree on the details of this proposal.

The negotiating breakthrough announced Wednesday was spearheaded by Postmaster-General Andre Ouellet, Jean-Claude Parrot, president of the 23,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW), and Dennis McDermott, president of the Canadian Labor Congress.

The agreement in principle was to reduce the work week by giving postal workers a half-paid, one-hour meal break. However, the government now wants them to perform the same amount of work in 37½ hours that they now perform in 40 hours, the union official said.

The government wants to measure the productivity of individual workers, a practice the union wants banned.

As the marathon negotiations resumed today, it was confirmed that the Ottawa and Monteal CUPW locals have voted to give union officials a strike mandate. Weekend strike votes are set in Toronto and Vancouver, the other two key CUPW locals.

Victoria-area CUPW members were also to be voting Sunday.

Thousands flee Ontario fires

The Canadian Press

More than 5,000 persons were forced from their homes in northern Ontario, hundreds more were preparing to leave, and firefighters battling almost 600 forest fires across Canada were warned today to expect little immediate relief from the hot, humid weather fostering many of the steadily-spreading blazes.

In B.C., a 50,000-acre forest fire was one of 238 burning throughout the province.

B.C. and Alberta firefighters were combining forces against the fire, raging out of control along the B.C.-Alberta boundary east of Fort Nelson.

In Ontario, about 5,000 people were evacuated from the gold-mining town of Red Lake as a fire spread over 8,000 acres moved toward the town.

Another dangerous fire was a 35,000-acre blaze that threatened to destroy the remote community of Fort Hope, an Indian settlement 350 kilometres north of Thunder Bay.

About 600 residents of the lumber town were evacuated Thursday.

In Manitoba, firefighters were preparing to defend the north edge of Snow Lake, a community about 700 kilometres north of Winnipeg, as shifting winds brought a huge forest fire to within five kilometres of the town.

Most women and children left the mining community of 2,000 on Tuesday.

The fire raging in the Porcupine Provincial Forest in west central Manitoba has consumed more than 370 square kilometres.

In Saskatchewan, at least 68 fires were burning. However, Alberta was the province hit hardest by fires. Officials said they could not remember such severe conditions this early in the year.

At least 61 fires were burning Thursday in Alberta, destroying more than 1.3 million acres.

"I've never seen fires burn like this, where you've got 80- to 100-foot trees and flames three times as high," said Joe Smith, air operations officer at Peace River.

today's markets

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market was up sharply in active mid-afternoon trading.

The Toronto Stock Exchange said trading in Ronalds-Federated Ltd., which was halted late Thursday, resumed at the opening but there were no trades by 2 p.m. The stock last traded at $27.

The Ontario Securities Commission rejected an application by Newsco Investments Ltd. for an exemption from making a follow-up offer to minority shareholders of Ronalds-Federated.

Newsco has bought 51.6 per cent of Ronalds-Federated from Thomson Newspapers Ltd. for $30 a share.

Trading in shares of Standard Industries Ltd., which was halted May 19, resumed at 12:30 p.m. and the company's class A stock was up ½ to $8 by 2 p.m.

The Ontario Securities Commission ordered Canada Cement Lafarge Ltd. to suspend its trading in shares of Standard until Canada Cement provides an independent evaluation of Standard or abandons its takeover bid.

Canada Cement holds 70 per cent of Standard's shares and has offered $7.50 a share for the remainder.

Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prices were mixed in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Of the stocks that traded, 136 advanced, 114 declined and 164 remained unchanged.

B.C. Resources Investment Corp. led trading in the industrials and lost .05 to $6¼ on 19,890 shares. Great National Land was unchanged at $1.20 on 3,400 shares, Taro Industries was steady at $4.50 on 1,900 and Daon Development Corp. was unchanged at $7⅜ on 900. TDI Venture preferred A was steady at .45 and Canadian Javelin Ltd. gained .05 to $1.25.

Amflo Petroleum was the volume leader among resource issues and was unchanged at $3 on 310,700 shares. Zone Petroleum dropped .04 to $2.40 on 111,900 shares, United Westland Warrants advanced .05 to .80 on 38,100 and Kandahar Resources rose .02 to $1.55 on 25,533. Colby Resources gained .03 to $2.58 and Laredo Petroleum advanced .05 to $2.25.

Pilgrim Petroleum led traders on the curb exchange, and gained .20 to $1.50 on 51,200 shares. Tracer Resources advanced .16 to $2.01 on 31,400 shares, Ark Energy warrants rose .04½ to .35 on 23,600 and Jalna Resources gained .09 to $1.35 on 21,000. Morning Star Warrants declined .02¼ to a quarter of a cent and River Mountain Resources gained .05 to .47.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rose in fairly active trading as major U.S. banks sharply lowered a key business loan rate and the government announced the slowest monthly inflation increase in more than a year.

Citibank, the second largest U.S. bank, dropped its prime lending rate Friday, which applies to business loans, an extraordinary two percentage points to 14½ per cent. A number of other banks quickly followed that lead.

Banking and financial issues were generally higher. Beneficial Corp. rose ½ to $23, Chase Manhattan ¼ to $42½, Citicorp ⅜ to $21⅝ and BankAmerica ¼ to $25¼. Household Finance slipped ⅛ to $17¼.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — The London stock market was mixed near the close of trading.

The Financial Times index dropped 3.2 to 423.3.

Equities declined while golds moved higher.

Canadian stocks firmed.

I think California Fever was a really good show. I was wondering how come it's not on TV anymore. Are they taking a break in shooting or were they cancelled? Please say they're taking a break. Are there any shows that Jimmy McNichol will be in on TV soon? — Cindy Lamon, Minden, Nev.

I could say they're just on a break, but it wouldn't be true. "Fever never caught fire in the ratings and was dropped from the schedule. But Jimmy is making a made-for TV movie with sister Kristy, wherein the one rescues the other from a religious cult.

Lakehill home's turned-brick fence tricky to build

Across the front lawn of Brian and Lynn Glenn's brick home on Nicholson is a unique fence made up of spiral brick pillars and a chain from a log boom. It was built by previous owner Al Curtis, a stonemason whose father, also a stonemason, helped to build Vic High. "A fence like that would cost you $2,500 to have built today because of the time it takes" says Al Curtis. He built it in four eight-foot sections, with a three-quarter inch reinforcing rod threaded through a hole in the centre of each 2½x4x8 brick. Sections were built vertically, turned to the horizontal after the concrete cured, which can take two or three months. Al took his four-year apprenticeship at the vocational school in Burnaby.

COLLECTIBLES

By JOHN HEARN

When I picked up a copy of James Mackay's book, Childhood Antiques, I wondered whether the subject was substantial enough to warrant a book of that size; on reading it, it soon became apparent that there was material enough for ten such books and all of them fascinating. When you think in terms of dolls, toys and children's books, just to mention a few possible categories, it will be seen that the subject is vast.

The survival value of childhood antiques is not great. Children are not famous for the tender loving care they bestow on the artifacts which pass through their tiny hands; toys get broken, dolls are handled to death, books torn and scribbled in, clothes worn out. It is a miracle that anything survives at all.

The task confronting the collector, therefore, is a challenging one and like so many general categories of collectibles it begins with one of selectivity. Dolls, books and toys, as mentioned above, are complete collectibles in their own right and each of them breaks down into many sub-categories — after all, there are now over four billion people living on this planet and all of them were children once. The child's world is a very complete one, duplicating the adult world in almost every particular only in miniature.

Turning over the beautifully illustrated pages of Mackay's book, ideas for collectors come swarming to the surface. Here we see pioneer rocker cradles and caned highchairs both of which sometimes turn up at country auctions; baby plates and alphabet plates are popular as are the feeding bottles and decorated mugs. Baby carriages known to the Victorians as perambulators — later contracted to 'prams' — were often marvels of elegance and many of these also survived. There was a superstitition, as I remember it, that saving such things as prams and highchairs was the best guarantee against having to use them again; to throw them out was to tempt fate — an old wives tale which makes the task of today's collector that much easier.

Antique toys were not governed by that same superstitution and are therefore somewhat harder to find in good condition. They fascinate us today by reason of their high nostalgia content; we may be prejudiced but it is hard for us to believe that they were not more exciting to the children themselves than today's plastic artifacts which look as though they were designed by computers to be played with by computers.

Those of us whose childhood dates back to before World War Two (which makes us antiques but not necessarily collector's items) remember our own personal joys — hobby horses and rocking horses, train sets, tin models held together with lugs which rarely stood up to our boisterous handling, tiny merry-go-rounds, tin soldiers, spelling blocks, ludo sets, model planes, jigsaw puzzles, marbles and yoyos. Best of all in my memory were those long defunct whipping tops. How they ever fell from favour I shall never know.

Mackay tells a good story about the invention of the teddy bear. A political cartoon n the Washington Evening Star on 18 November 1902 alluded to the fact that President Theodore (Teddy) Roosevelt had baulked at shooting tiny bear cub while on a hunting exhibition in the Rockies. Morris Michtom, a toymaker, was inspired by the cartoon to produce the creature which achieved international fame as the Teddy Bear. The Ideal Toy Company made a fortune out of it and sixty yers later was commissioned by the U.S. government to develop Smokey Bear for the U.S. Forest Service. On the way, the original Teddy spawned such offspring as Yogi Bear, Rupert Bear and the immortal Winnie-the-Pooh. All good collectibles have a good story to go with them.

Perhaps the most charming of childhood antiques are nursery miniatures, some of which were made to furnish dolls houses and some were salesman's samples — perfect replicas of everyday objects made for each portability in the salesman's display kit. Photographs in the book show lovingly created interiors which, if it were not that they were peopled by dolls, could easily pass for the real thing.

Childhood Antiques should still be obtainable through your bookstores. If they do not have it in stock I am sure they will be glad to order it for you from Fitzhenry and Whiteside.

Readers' letters should be addressed to Collector's Item, R.R. No. 1 Lowbanks, Ontario N0A 1K0.

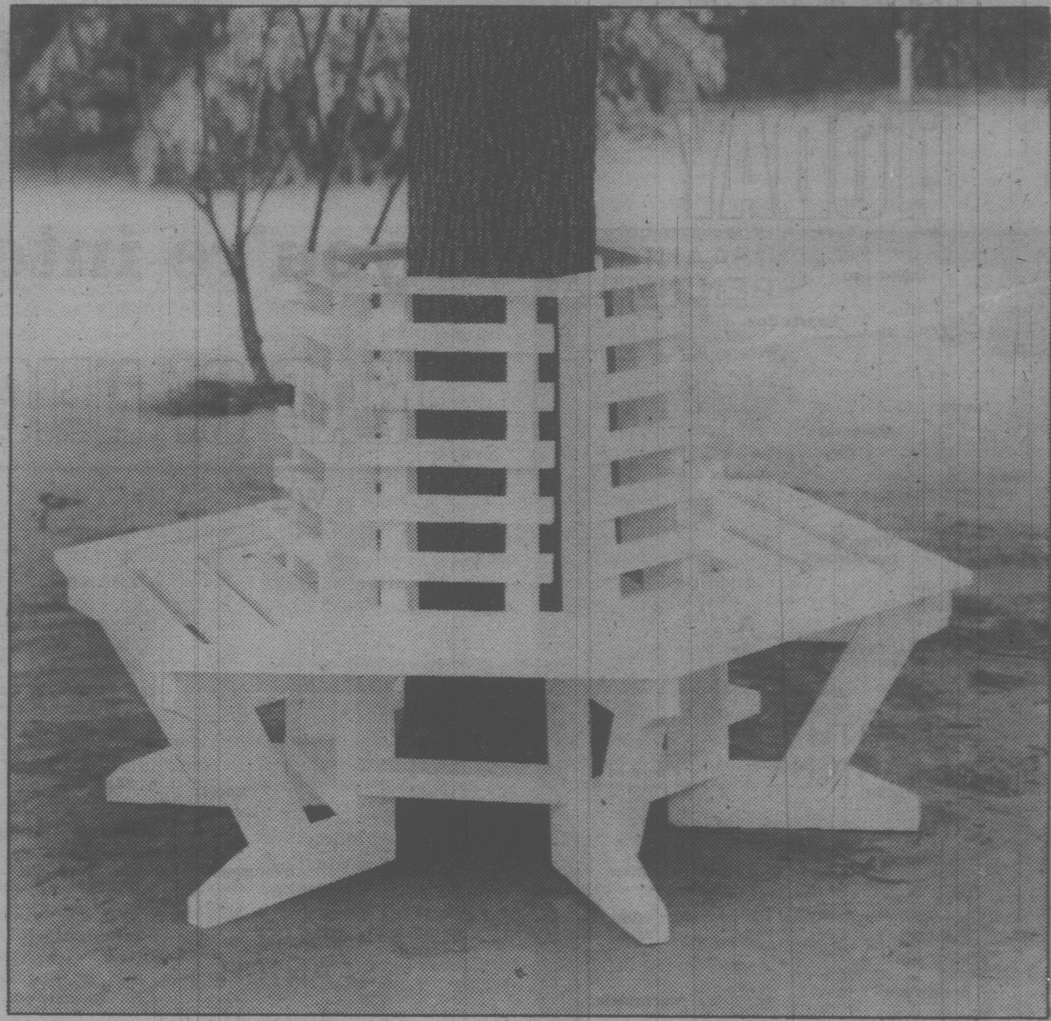
A shady place for gardeners



By STEVE ELLINGSON

Hot summer days turn a shade-giving tree into a focal point in many yards. And — a perfectly air-conditioned home is a poor substitute for the cool fragrance-laden breezes that can be enjoyed beneath it. How nice it is, too, after spending an hour or two in our garden, on the business end of a hoe or shovel, to have a convenient and shady place to sit down and rest with a cool drink. It is for these reasons that these seats have become more popular than ever. The pattern for building the tree-seat is full-size and is an easy project. You need only trace the pattern part on wood, then saw them out and put the parts together.

The pattern for the tree seat is made in such a way that it can be built to fit any size tree.

To obtain the tree seat pattern number 352 send $2.00 (please add fifty cents extra for postage and handling) by cheque or money order to: U-Bild Pattern Dept., Box 160, Cote St. Luc, Montreal, Quebec, H4V 2Y3.

Underground solar house

BELFOUNTAIN, Ont. (CP) — Having to cut the grass on the roof does spoil some of the fun for Mike McGrath at his underground solar-heated house.

The house also attracts a considerable number of curious passers-by.

But those are the major drawbacks to McGrath's new home overlooking a small valley in the Caledon hills about 50 kilometres northwest of Toronto.

Shaped like a V on its side and covered with 18 inches of loam and sod, the house was designed by architect John Hix to combine the best working technology available on solar energy, heat storage and insulation.

"We get too much heat in winter," McGrath said. "We have a backup electrical heating system and have used it only once this winter. And that was by mistake."

The sun shines through 840 square metres of window on the south side. Heat is stored in the thick concrete of the internal walls and a 45,500-litre water tank.

The cost of running the pump that transfers the heat of the inside' air to the water was only $125 last winter.

"You could say that 70 per cent of our solar heating is passive," McGrath said. "The windows are the collectors and the house itself the storage unit. Having thick internal walls is like storing heat in a rock covered by a blanket."

The air-conditioning yystem — which works harder in winter than summer since the sun's rays strike the windows more directly — keeps the temperature within an ideal range of four degrees Celsius.

The futuristic idea of the house took root when McGrath and his wife Kitty were looking for a 19th-century farmhouse to restore.

The finally bought an old barn with five acres of land, intending to use its foundation for a house, but the barn burned down and the foundation was ruined.

That's when they decided to build a house "that would last forever."

McGrath estimated the property and three bedroom structure — about 1,980 square metres of living space — are worth $250,000.

However, if he had it to do over again, he probably would omit the soil and sod on the roof, he said. An embankment on the north and good, standard insulation might have been as effective. And it might have made the house a little less conspicuous. As it is, the couple find their home is a little too much of a tourist attraction. "I'm thinking of putting a sign at the road announcing visiting hours," said Mrs. McGrath.

Newest Formica is dark and textured

1980 N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Plastic laminate, the familiar material that covers countless counters and cabinets, desks and dining tables, is often taken for granted. Modern designers usually specify the solid colors, shying away from wood-grain or the soon-to-be-revived — according to 1950's fans — boomerang and marbled patterns.

But there are changes afoot. The Formica Corporation, a leading manufacturer whose name is synonymous with the plastic laminate material, this week introduced Design Concepts, its new range of laminate patterns.

According to the company, the new patterns were "designed by designers for designers" — the result of collaboration with its Design Advisory Board, a group of 17 architects and designers who for the last two years worked with Formica on different uses for its material.

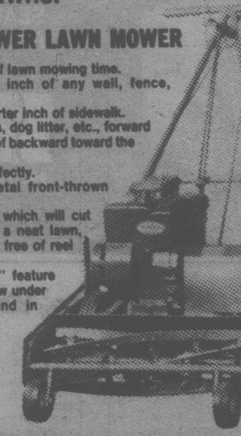
The new patterns definitely tend toward the geometric — with the now ubiquitous grid in first place. The backgrounds are solid colors, with a predominantly dark palette. No pinks, no turquoises, no primary hues.

Eight colors will be available, all in a high-gloss lacquer finish: white, beige, gray, black and brown; also dark green, navy blue and burgundy, but only as "accents." Not surprisingly, there's not a wood-grain in sight.

The laminates, which are made in France, emphasize textures. The designer John Saladino contributed "Stripe," a pattern with alternating bands of shiny and matte bands. "Disc" is a miniature version of the classic Pirelli-floor pattern, with raised discs.

As a group, it is a handsome, if conservative, collection of designs that complement current trends. The new patterns will be available in May through Formica distributors. Retail prices are expected to range from $1 to $1.50 a square foot.

The new laminates do raise a question of maintenance, however. The shiny, lacquer-like surfaces show fingerprints easily; the raised disc pattern looks as if it may be hard to keep clean if used on a horizontal surface.



COMPARISON PROVES

THE CALIFORNIA TRIMMER HAS NO EQUAL!

Here's the mower for people who care about their lawns.

A TRIMMER POWER LAWN MOWER

1. Saves fifty per cent of lawn mowing time.
2. Mows within a half inch of any wall, fence, walkway or tree.
3. Mows within one-quarter inch of sidewalk.
4. Delivers grass, leaves, dog litter, etc., forward into the catcher instead of backward toward the operator.
5. Sweeps up leaves pefectly.
6. Has large grass metal front-thrown catcher.
7. Has high-speed reel which will cut any grass and produce a neat lawn, smooth as a carpet and free of reel marks.
8. Has "Free Wheeling" feature enabling the user to mow under low-hanging shrubs and in hard-to-get places.

ENERGYSAVE

By PETER TONGE
The Christian Science Monitor News Service.

This is the first of seven articles on do-it-yourself energy conservation in which writer Peter Tonge gives tips on plugging energy leaks in your home, tapping and storing solar heat, and insulating your shutters and hot-water heater.

Two university professors at opposite ends of North America are saying much the same thing about an increasingly expensive energy future: that cost doesn't matter all that much — or rather it doesn't have to matter.

There is so much, they say, that the individual can do for himself and his family in the transitional period that lies ahead: the changeover from a wasteful sense of abundance to a sustainable, interesting lifestyle; from gluttonous consumption to prudent or rational use of energy and other resources.

Dr. John F. Godfrey, an historian and president of King' College in Halifax, Nova Scotia, has been expounding his views in newspaper and magazine articles, principally in Canada; Dr. Warren Johnson, head of the department of geography at San Diego State University has propounded a similar and detailed message in his book, Muddling Toward Frugality (Shambhala Publications), which is attracting considerable comment around the country.

Both men indicate that while energy-altered lifestyles may lie ahead, the standard of living need not suffer. It even could improve in the sense that it ultimately will be more interesting and less stressful. The need is to adapt to a more energy-frugal lifestyle not in the sense of discarding anything that is meaningful but of avoiding everything that is wasteful.

The throw-away society, distasteful to both professors now, ultimately will be anathema to the public as well. Sheer economics will dictate this. Home heating already is a case in point. When heating oil cost 15 cents a gallon, who cared if much of the generated heat was lost to the great outdoors? Now, at 90 cents and more a gallon, everyone cares. Waste suddenly has become intolerable; weatherstripping and insulation, a necessity. Inexorably, this aproach will extend to much of what we now use, say the professors.

Don't equate frugality with deprivation. Indeed, the Latin origin of the word "frugalis" means useful or worthy, Johnson points out. In other words, the frugal life of the future is one which retains that which is useful and worthwhile.

In his book, Johnson puts it this way: "If the earth is to be a true home for us, a place of refuge and nurture, we may as well start to think about how we can make it such a place. The task will not be as difficult as it may sound, and requires no wishful thinking about technological breakthroughs, effective government or heightened human consciousness. We can move toward a secure, sustainable way of life easily if we accept the logic of frugality."

What then is frugality? Everything from wearing a sweater indoors during winter to turning off unwanted lights to developing new handyman-type skills. It means buying or making durable products that can be used and reused, worn and repaired rather than briefly enjoyed and then discarded. It means buying for function more than form. Ask yourself, "Will it meet my need?" rather than, "Does it look good?" It means finding new uses for used items, even using a screw-top bottle as a hot-water bottle in the reduced heat of your bedroom. It also means making a compost heap from the 500 or so pounds of kitchen waste the average family throws away each year and growing some vegetables with the finished product.

The future will challenge our ingenuity. The need will be to search out ways of avoiding waste and to act accordingly. In short, we must make energy efficiency a personal goal. Don't underestimate the possibilities. Of all the energy used in the United States, more than one-quarter is consumed in the home.

Whatever doesn't have to be manufactured or transported long distance means that much less energy consumed by the nation as a whole — and that much less vulnerability to the political whims and fancies of foreign oil suppliers. But in the end, a much more convincing force than patriotism will convert the general public to this conserving way of life: It will make simple economic sense to be that way.

As both Professors Godfrey and Johnson point out, in the future the difference between moderate wealth and marginal living is less likely to be governed by income than by one's ability (or lack of it) to fend for oneself and generally live without waste. What you can save, rather than what you have to spend, will become the determining factor. "Wealth by saving" is how both professors express it.

"If you can put in a new sink without calling on the plumber, do your own auto servicing, or convert an old packing case into a kitchen countertop, you can readily be a thousand dollars ahead of the game," says Godfrey. "The age of the specialist is coming to an end," he adds. "The more skills — preferably artisan-type skills — a person develops, the better equipped he will be." These savings are the "unmeasured wealth" of many families and such savings are tax free.

Western Red Cedar Shingles and Shakes
A Handbook of Good Practice

A new comprehensive guide to the varied applications of Western Red Cedar shingles and shakes has been published by the Council of Forest Industries of British Columbia.
It is available for $2.00 from the COFI Bookstore, 1400-1055 West Hastings Street, Vancouver, B.C. V6E 2H1.

Titled "A Handbook of Good Practice", this 40 page publication contains detailed information on correct installation procedures for a wide variety of shingle and shake applications and is illustrated throughout with colour photos and easy-to-follow technical drawings.

Driving to bargains.... is it smart?

The Christian Science Monitor News Service

BOSTON, Mass. — When Nancy Pierpont, a resident of Greater Boston, opened the flier from a distant department store, the ad for a set of stainless steel cookware filled her with disappointment. She had just bought the same set locally and paid several dollars more than the department store price.

She was $6 dollars poorer than need be, or so it appeared at first glance. then she did a little calculating and found she was, in fact, ahead of the game for having shopped locally.

To get the lower-priced item she would have put 45 miles round trip on the family car. According to figures developed by the travel-cost consultants, Runzheimer & Co. of Rochester, Wis., gas and oil in the Greater Boston area would have run at 6.63 cents per mile for her compact car, or $2.98 for the journey. According to Runzheimer consultant Judith Dettinger, general maintenance would have run out at 1.21 cents per mile (66 cents). She also would have worn 25 cents worth of rubber off the car tires, always presuming they were correctly inflated and properly aligned to bring the total coast of the journey to $3.78. At this stage her "loss" on the purchase would have been reduced to less than half the original estimation. But there still was more to account for.

Because the trip would have consumed most of her afternoon, dinner preparation would have suffered, necessitating the purchase of precooked or other take-out foods to feed her family on time. Estimated additional cost: $3. Even assuming her own time had no monetary value, she was a conservative 78 cents better off for making the local purchase.

The point is, it is getting ever more economical to shop at a convenient local store and to leave the car in the garage even when the savings from a distant store appear to be moderately significant. The need is for people to think of the costs involved before driving any distance for that advertised "special" or other bargain. The old World War II slogan, "Is this trip really necessary?" is pertinent again.

Despite the ever-increasing cost of gas and oil, the on-the-road costs remain a small fraction of the total cost of owning an automobile. Insurance, debt servicing, excise tax, registratin fes and depreciation combine in these inflated times for a whopping annual bill of $1,811 for the newer model large cars. That's $4.96 a day even if the car stays locked in the garage!

A young woman executive in Boston sold her car after a few simple calculations "showed me how much it was costing me." She is within walking distance of the office and public transportation is moderately good in the city. She also bought a bicycle for use in summer. When she need private transporation, she uses a taxi or hires a car, which she does several times a year.

This luxurious three bedroom leisure home has all of the style and convenience appointments of a large urban residence. It is ideally suited to the medium frontage recreational building site, yet contains over 1,400 square feet of finished floor area, for present use, and a further floor area in potential in the un-finished upper level. The handsome and clean-lined exterior, finished in horizontal channel siding, with brick veneer and chimney, small-paned shttered windows and a shake or more traditional shingle roof, has the appearance of a residential cottage, enabling it to harmonize well into a wide variety of natural settings.

The patio-style main entrance leads into a central hallway and outerwear storage area, past the stairway to the second level, and into the long rectangular living-dining room combination. The living room features a raised-hearth masonry fireplace and log storage for convivial "at-homes". The open dining area separates from the kitchen via convenient snack bar counter, and could easily accommodate a standard-size dining suite for more formal dining. The living room connects via sliding glass doors to an enclosed rear patio, for pleasant evenings outdoors in fine weather.

A well-planned U-shape kitchen has a logical work triangle, generous countertop work surface and abundant cupboard storage. It has a convenient entry door from the front patio, for easy grocery and supply deliveries.

All three bedrooms are positioned well away from the main entertaining area, for freedom from disturbance, and are grouped around the central bath, sauna and laundry-utility area. Each has generous closet storage and good exposure for view and natural light. The master bedroom features sliding glass doors opening onto the front decking.

The bathing complex features a central three-piece bath with tub, an adjacent two-piece vanity bath with shower, and a separate sauna area. The laundry-utility and service core are immediately adjacent to the bath complex for greater convenience.

This is an excellent design for a commodious second home for the larger family which prefers comfort and convenience while on vacation or week-ending.

Plans for design No. 0-1403 may be purchased either by the single set, at a cost of $85.00 for the first set and $15.00 for each additional set, or by the package. A five-set plan package, includinging the first set, is economically priced at $135.00 and an eight-set package, also ncluding the first set, is only $175.00.

Whichever method you choose, please include $5.00 for postage and handling. B.C. residents add 4 per cent sales tax.

Send for the current edition of Select Home Designs' cottage magazine, Series 45, featuring money-saving, do-it-yourself ideas and informative articles on the Canadian cottaging scene, plus 16 full-colour pages of quality cottage plans for all seasons. Available for $2.50 ($1.75 plus .75 cents postage and handling).

To order any of these items please send cheque or money order, payable to the Home of the Week. Address to: Home of the Week, 382 West Broadway, Vancouver, B.C., V5Y 1R2.

DECOR SCORE

Suggestions for decorating two different rooms

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. We've just converted our garage into a second living room because our existing living room was getting too heavy wear from our three children.

I now can have some formal furnishings in the living room and a more relaxed and lounging atmosphere in the garage conversion. Please suggest some ideas for decorating this new room so it will be functional and pleasant yet not destroy my budget which was nearly exhausted by the construction itself. — A.C.

A. You might be inspired by a room created by designer Virginia Frankel who took advantage of limited space by using carpeted seating platforms and built-ins together in a basement transformation.

She selected a mottled brown and gray carpeting for the floor and platforms, topping the platforms with bright blue corduroy pillows and seating cushions. The carpeting provided acoustical insulation and warmth.

The built-in furnishings were placed on the diagonal and a small window over the banquette was treated with a shoji and recessed lighting to add to the illumination of the room and camouflage small, unattractive basement windows.

She added more drama with a batik-inspired wall covering repeating the blue and earthen tones.

Q. Some months ago we bought a beautiful new contemporary sofa with a blue background and red, blue, off-white and beige flowers in it.

Since we bought it we have moved and need to start making some purchases for our new home. What color would you suggest for a lounge chair or chairs and also what would you choose for chairs around a game table?

I am planning beige carpeting and walls. Does that sound right? That is what we had at our previous home and they looked great with the sofa. — W.T.

A. Beige walls and carpeting sound beautiful for background of your room and the sofa will furnish the colors to draw from.

Why don't you use the blue of the background of your sofa as the color for your lounge chair or chairs? Perhaps a snappy red nubby weave would be just the right thing for two or four game chairs and a woodtoned table. It sounds like you'll have a delightful room.

Please send questions for Decor Score to Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper.

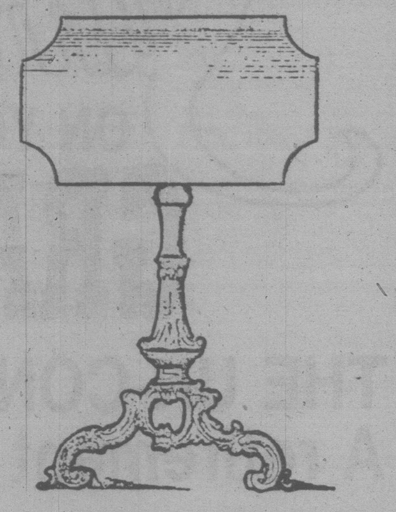
MAGIC CARPETS!

If you're looking for an ideal sound buffer or an excellent insulating device, you can't go wrong with carpeting, say decorating experts.

Carpeting absorbs noise and softens sound. It also keeps heat and air conditioning in. Surveys indicate that you can save from 11 to 14 per cent on your heating and cooling bills by splurging on all-over carpeting.

TABLES

Antique Furniture File



Victorian? Guess again! This tilt-top table appeared in the 1765 edition of Genteel Household Furniture in the Present Taste by the Society of Upholsterers and Cabinet-Makers. However, this type of rococo design did not become popular until the third quarter of the 19th century. At that time, tables like this were made of walnut, mahogany or rosewood. The current price would range from $300 to $500.

NOW YOU KNOW

Insulating cottage ceilings, heat pumps, vinyl siding

By GEORGE DALGLEISH

Q. We have a cottage roof that we would like to insulate. It is a cathedral style ceiling with 2x10 rafters and plywood sheeting on the bottom. There is no insulation in there now. What can we use?

A. It is possible to insulate between the roof rafters but you must leave an airspace between the bottom of the roof deck and the top of the insulation. You would have to remove the existing plywood and then install friction fit fibreglass insulation, leaving a 2 or 3-inch space above the insulation and under the roof deck. Then it would be very important that you install a continuous ridgevent as well as continuous soffit venting. If you don't do this then condensation can form in that area during the cold winter months. On real cold days the condensation will freeze into frost and then melt when it gets warmer and cause problems with your ceiling. I know that many builders do not install continuous ridge venting but it is very important. Since the warm moist air rises to the peak it is necessary to let it out so it doesn't cause the accumulation of moisture there. Another method would be to sheet the existing ceiling with 2 or 3 inches of extruded polystyrene such as Styrofoam SM Board. This material has an R-factor or 5 per inch and is blue in color. Three inches would give you an R15 factor. Then you could install half-inch plasterboard using long drywall screws right into the bottom of the roof rafters. If you were taking down the plywood to put in fibreglass insulation you could also sheet the bottom of the ceiling with an inch or two of Styrofoam before putting the plywood back up. If you do take the plywood down remember to install a vapor barrier underneath the finished surface of the ceiling as close to the interior surface as possible. A near perfect vapor barrier will eliminate a lot of condensation and moisture problems.

Q. We are planning on installing central air conditioning this summer and our heating contractor suggested that we install a heat pump. What do you think of heat pumps?

A. A heat pump is a reversible air conditioning unit. It supplies air conditioning for the home in the summer and heat for the home in the winter by reversing itself. A heat pump is one of the most efficient machines for converting electrical energy to heat. For every unit of energy put into the machine you get two to six units of energy out. There is no other heating device that efficient. But a heat pump is only practical down to a certain temperature. In my testing I have found that they do not work efficiently lower than about —17°C. The heat pump would then shut itself off at this temperature and your other heating system would take over. In some cases it is possible to have the heat pump running at the same time as your furnace. It can run in conjunction with a gas furnace, oil furnace or electric furnace. There is no need to change your existing furnace because all you do is add the heat exchange coils in the main plenum of the furnace. Since it is the same basic unit as an air conditioning unit there are no major renovations required. The heat pump-air conditioner is installed outside the house and the lines are run into the heat exchanger. I would recommend that you get a heat pump that has a demand defrost. Just as a frost free refrigerator has to defrost itself every so often, so does a heat pump in the winter time. This takes additional energy since the unit changes itself into an air conditioning unit for a short period of time to melt the frost off the coils. This in itself takes energy as well as more energy is required by your existing furnace to counteract the cold produced by the heat pump as it defrosts itself. So a timed defrost may defrost a unit when it is not necessary, whereas a true demand defrost will only defrost when it is required. In areas such as the prairies where the air is quite dry, this defrost cycle may only be necessary once a day, once a week or maybe only once a month. In other more humid areas it may be necessary more often, but it will only be done as it is required with the demand system. One such unit that I have personally investigated which has this particular feature is the York Heat Pump-Air Conditioning Unit.

Q. We want to install a roof over our patio deck. We want to attach it to the house. What kind of supports do we need to hold up the outside part of the roof?

A. In most areas when a roof or any structure is attached to an existing structure a proper footing or foundation has to be installed to support the outside edge of it. Check with the building inspection department in your area. In most cases a proper foundation or support would consist of concrete piles installed well below the frost line or a continuous grade beam set on piles. Sometimes it is possible to get around this requirement by not attaching the roof to the actual house but rather setting the roof on posts right next to the house. In other words, the roof is actually free standing and in this case no problems would be encountered with movement of the roof due to heaving or settling of the ground under the support. If you attach the roof to the house it is usually easier to do that under the eaves rather than to tie it right into the eave. If you tie it in underneath the eave to the house, simply use lag screws right into the existing house studs. Usually fir 2x4 or 2x6 framing is used for a patio roof. Your local building supply dealer likely has more information and details on how one is constructed.

Q. We are planning to install vinyl siding on our house this summer after nailing on some rigid insulation. Do you think that installing vinyl siding is a handyman project? Do you have any tests that you have done on vinyl siding?

A. Installing vinyl siding is usually not a home handyman project. This is because it is very important that proper expansion joints be left and the size of these joints will depend on the climate in your area as well as when the job is done. For example if the siding is applied on a very cold day such as in early spring or late fall then less expansion space is left than if it is installed on a hot summer day. Also proper nailing of the vinyl siding is very important to allow it to expand without buckling. Also space must be left for expansion and contraction at the corners. If you acquaint yourself with all the do's and don'ts of installing vinyl siding and you are sure that you can follow these instructions to a "T" then likely you can do a good job. A good siding contractor of course will have a considerable amount of experience and should be able to do the job well. Unfortunately for every good siding contractor there is also a bad one. Siding contractors and salesmen have become so notorious that they are the brunt of many jokes and the subjects of comic strips. You would be best to get a recommendation from your siding contractor so that you can check with other people who have had siding done by him. Also make sure that you get a good product. As far as testing of vinyl siding is concerned, I haven't had any actual tests done on any particular brand, but I have had installed for my observation a product called Esclad which is made by Imperial Oil. It has met all the requirements that I feel it should meet. It however is the only brand that I have looked into, so I would highly recommend that you investigate all brands available in your area before making your final decision. And if you do have a siding contractor do the job for you make sure that you have a contract with him, not just simply an estimate. One of the definitions of an estimate in the dictionary is "an approximate calculation".
